Introduction

Academic Writing is designed for anybody who is studying (or planning to study) at English-medium colleges and universities and has to write essays and other assignments for exams or coursework. International students especially find the written demands of their courses extremely challenging. On top of the complexity of the vocabulary of academic English they have to learn a series of conventions in style, referencing and organisation.

Academic Writing is a flexible course that allows students to work either with a teacher or by themselves, to practise those areas which are most important for their studies. Many students find that they have very limited time to prepare for their courses, and that writing is only one of several skills they need to master. The structure of the book has been made as simple as possible to allow users to find what they want quickly.

The course is organised to provide maximum hands-on practice for students. Skills are developed from writing at the paragraph level, through organising the various sections of an essay, to discussing statistics and describing charts. This book is divided into four parts:

- 1) The Writing Process guides students from the initial stage of understanding an essay title, through reading and note-making, to the organisation of an essay and the final stage of proof-reading.
- 2) Elements of Writing deals with the key skills that are needed for all types of assignments, such as making definitions and giving references, and is organised alphabetically.
- 3) Accuracy in Writing gives remedial practice in those areas that students tend to find most confusing, such as definite articles and relative pronouns, again in alphabetical order.
- 4) Writing Models gives examples of the types of writing that students commonly need, including letters and survey reports.

All units are cross-referenced and a comprehensive key is provided at the end. There is also a Writing Tests section for assessing level and progress.

Although every effort has been made to make Academic Writing as useful and accurate as possible, if students or teachers have any comments, criticisms or suggestions I would be very pleased to hear from them.

Instructions to students are printed like this:

Cross-references in margins look like this:

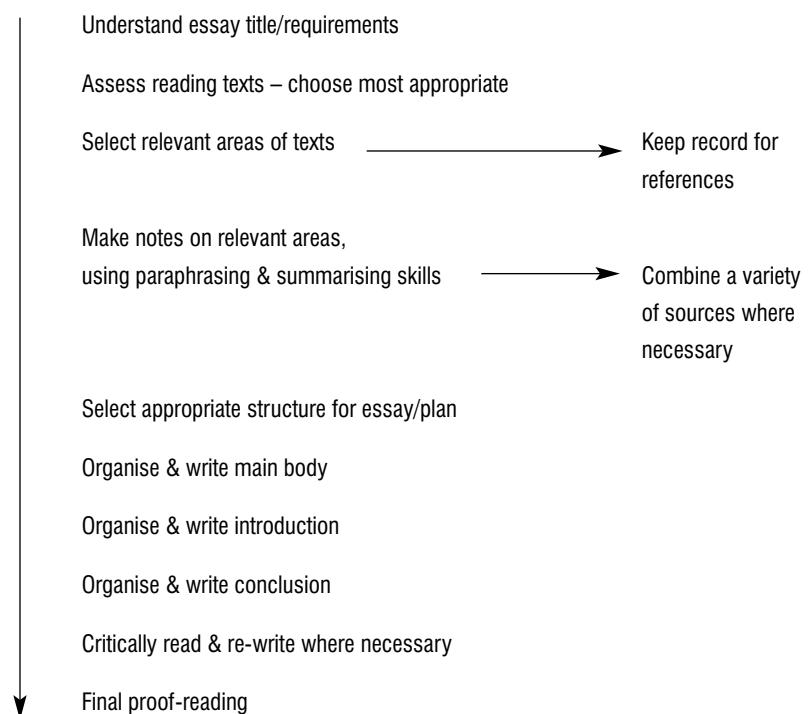

This means: refer to the unit on synonyms in Part 2 (Unit 11).

1. The Writing Process

Student Introduction

Most academic courses in English-medium colleges and universities use essays to assess students' work, both as coursework, for which a deadline one or two months ahead may be given, and in exams, when an essay often has to be completed in an hour.

The process of writing essays for coursework assignments can be shown in a flowchart:

Part 1, The Writing Process, examines each of these stages in turn. If students are concerned only with preparing for exam writing they could omit the reading and note-making stages, but if they have sufficient time they should work through every unit, preferably in the order given, for each stage builds on the previous one.

Although it is essential to understand the basic writing process, at the same time it will be useful to be aware of the elements which contribute to good academic writing. When practising note-making, for example, it is helpful to be aware of the conventions of referencing, and so students should use the cross-reference boxes to look at the unit on References and Quotations in Part 2.

1. Background to Writing

Some of the terms used to describe different types of writing assignments can be confusing. In addition, students need to be clear about the basic components of written texts. This unit provides an introduction to these topics.

1. Students may have to produce various types of written work as part of their courses.

Complete the table to show the main purpose of the following, and their usual approximate length.

Type	Purpose	Length
letter	for formal and informal communication	usually less than 500 words notes report project essay thesis/dissertation article/paper

2. Organisation of texts.

- a) Explain the following terms in italic:

Shorter texts, e.g. essays, are normally organised in the form:

Introduction > Main Body > Conclusion

Longer texts, e.g. dissertations and articles, may include (depending on subject area):

Abstract > Contents > Introduction > Main Body > Case Study > Discussion > Findings > Conclusion > Acknowledgements > Bibliography/References > Appendices

Books may also contain:

Dedication > Foreword > Preface > Index

- b) Match the definitions below to one of the terms in (2a).

- i) Short summary (100–200 words) of the writer's purpose and findings)
- ii) Section where various people who assisted the writer are thanked)
- iii) Final part where extra data, too detailed for the main text, are stored)
- iv) List of all the books that the writer has consulted)
- v) Section looking at a particular example relevant to the main topic)
- vi) Introductory part of book which may give the writer's motives)
- vii) Alphabetical list of all topics in the text)

cross reference

- 3.1 Abbreviations
- 2.9 References and Quotations
- 3.15 Punctuation

3. Other text features.

Abbreviations are often used to save space:

Call Centres (CCs) feature prominently in the technology mix.

Italic is used to show titles and words from other languages:

Where once the titles of Armchair Theatre and The Wednesday Play celebrated ...

Squatter housing (called gecekondu in Turkish) ...

Footnotes are used to indicate references at the bottom of the page:

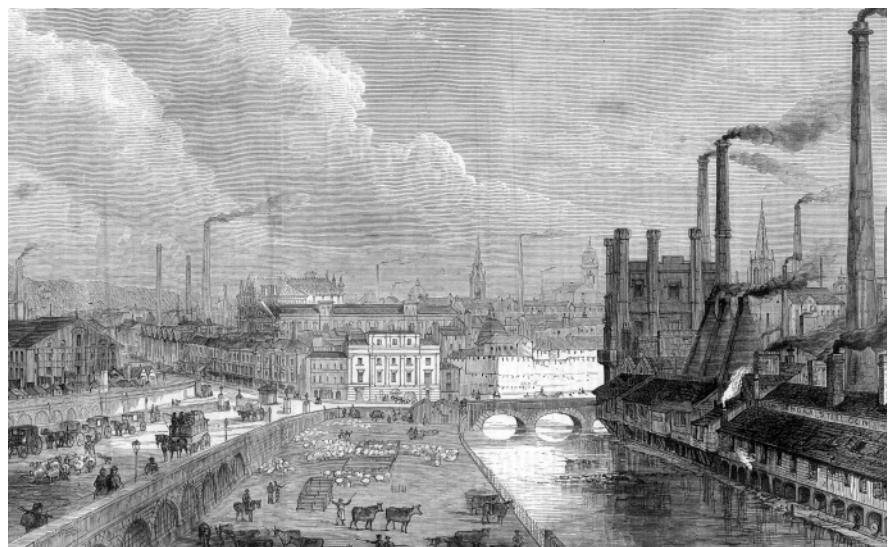

In respect of Singapore the consensus is that the government has made a difference.³

Endnotes are given to show references at the end of the article or chapter:

The market for masonry construction may be divided into housing and non-housing sectors [1]

Quotation marks are used to draw attention to a phrase, perhaps because it is being used in an unusual or new way:

The research shows that the 'pains of imprisonment' for women are...

4. All types of writing consist of a number of key elements.

Label the items in the text.

a) THE ORIGINS OF THE INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION

b) Introduction

c) It is generally agreed that the Industrial Revolution began in Britain during the eighteenth century, with significant developments in the iron, steel and textile industries. But it is less clear what caused this sudden increase in production in key areas; different writers have examined the availability of capital, the growth of urban populations and the political and

- d) religious climate. All of these may have played a part, but first it is necessary to consider the precise nature of what is meant by 'Industrial Revolution'.
- e) Industry had existed for thousands of years prior to the eighteenth century, but before this time society as a whole remained agricultural. With the arrival of the ironworks and cotton mills whole towns were dominated by industrial activity. At the same time, agriculture itself went through significant changes which produced more food for the growing urban population.

5. Why are all texts divided into paragraphs? How long are paragraphs?

Read the following text, from the introduction to an essay, and divide it into a suitable number of paragraphs.

INVESTMENT

Most people want to invest for the future, to cover unexpected financial difficulties and provide them with security. Different people, however, tend to have different requirements, so that a 25-year-old just leaving university would be investing for the long-term, whereas a 60-year-old who had just retired would probably invest for income. Despite these differences, certain principles apply in most cases. The first issue to consider is risk. In general, the greater the degree of risk in investment, the higher the return. Shares, for example, which can quickly rise or fall in value, typically have a higher yield than bonds, which offer good security but pay only about 5%. Therefore all investors must decide how much risk is appropriate in their particular situation. Diversification must also be considered in an investment strategy. Wise investors usually seek to spread their investments across a variety of geographical and business sectors. As accurate predictions of the future are almost impossible, it is best to have as many options as possible. A further consideration is investor involvement. Some investors opt for a high degree of involvement and want to buy and sell regularly, constantly watching the markets. Others want to invest and then forget about it. Personal involvement can be time-consuming and worrying, and many prefer to leave the management of their portfolios to professional fund managers.

2. Developing Plans from Titles

Most written work begins with a title, and students must be quite clear what question the title is asking before starting to plan the essay and read around the topic. This unit deals with analysing titles and making basic plans.

- When preparing to write an essay, it is essential to identify the main requirements of the title. You must be clear about what areas your teacher wants you to cover. This will then determine the organisation of the essay. For example:

Academic qualifications are of little practical benefit in the real world – Discuss.

Here the key word is discuss. Discussing involves examining the benefits and drawbacks of something.

Underline the key words in the following titles and consider what they are asking you to do.

- a) Define Information Technology (IT) and outline its main applications in medicine.
- b) Compare and contrast the appeal process in the legal systems of Britain and the USA.
- c) Evaluate the effect of mergers in the motor industry in the last ten years.
- d) Trace the development of primary education in Britain. Illustrate some of the issues currently facing this sector.

Note that most of the titles above have two terms in the title. You must decide how much importance to give to each section of the essay (e.g. title (a) might demand 10% for the definition and 90% for the outline).

- The following terms are also commonly used in essay titles.

Match the terms to the definitions on the right.

Analyse	Give a clear and simple account
Describe	Make a proposal and support it
Examine	Deal with a complex subject by giving the main points
State	Divide into sections and discuss each critically
Suggest	Give a detailed account
Summarise	Look at the various parts and their relationships

Cross Reference

- 1.10 Planning a Text
2.5 Discussion

- Almost all essays, reports and articles have the same basic pattern of organisation:

Introduction
Main body
Conclusion

The structure of the main body depends on what the title is asking you to do. In the case of a discuss type essay, the main body is often divided into two parts, one looking at the advantages of the topic and the other looking at the disadvantages.

A plan for the first example might look like this:

Academic qualifications are of little practical benefit in the real world – Discuss.

Introduction	variety of different qualifications different methods of assessment
Benefits	international standards for professions, e.g. doctors students have chance to study latest theories qualifications lead to better salaries and promotion
Drawbacks	many successful people don't have qualifications many qualified people don't have jobs
Conclusion	qualifications are useful but not guarantees of success

4. Write a plan for one of the titles in (1).

title
introduction
main body
conclusion

5. Teachers often complain that students write essays that do not answer the question set.

Consider the following titles and decide which sections should be included in each essay.

- a) Describe the growth of the European Union since 1975 and suggest its likely form by 2010.
 - A short account of European history 1900–2000
 - An analysis of candidates for membership before 2010
 - A discussion of the current economic situation in Europe
 - An outline of the enlargement of the EU between 1975 and now
- b) Summarise the arguments in favour of privatisation and evaluate its record in Britain.
 - A case study of electricity privatisation
 - An analysis of less successful privatisations
 - A study of major privatisations in the UK
 - A discussion of the benefits achieved by privatisation
- c) To what extent is tuberculosis (TB) a disease of poverty?
 - A definition of TB

A report on the spread of TB worldwide

A case study showing how TB relates to social class

A discussion of new methods of treating the disease

- d) Nursery education is better for children than staying at home with mother – Discuss.
 - A study of the growth of nurseries since 1995
 - A report on the development of children who remain at home until five
 - A discussion comparing speaking ability in the two groups of children
 - An outline of the increase of women in the labour market since 1960
- e) Compare studying in a library with using the internet. Will the former become redundant?
 - The benefits of using books
 - The drawbacks of internet sources
 - Predicted IT developments in the next 15 years
 - An outline of developments in library services since 1945

6. Underline the key terms in the following titles and decide what you are being asked to do.

Example:

Relate the development of railways to the rise of nineteenth-century European nationalism.

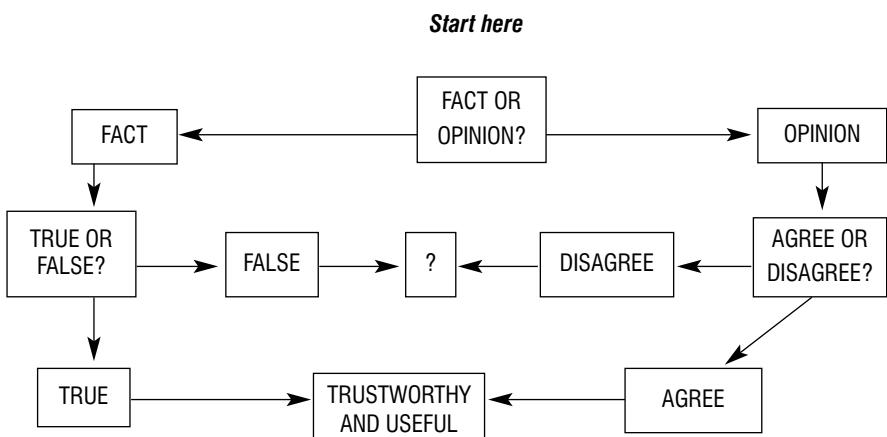

Relate means to link one thing to another. The title is asking for links to be made between the growth of railways in Europe in the nineteenth century and the political philosophy of nationalism. The writer must decide if there was a connection or not.

- a) Identify the main causes of rural poverty in China.
- b) Calculate the likely change in coffee consumption that would result from a 10% fall in the price of coffee beans.
- c) Classify the desert regions of Asia and suggest possible approaches to halting their spread.

3. Evaluating a Text

Having understood the title and made an outline plan, your next step is probably to read around the subject. Although you may be given a reading list, it is still vital to be able to assess the usefulness of journal articles and books. Time spent learning these skills will be repaid by saving you from using unreliable or irrelevant materials.

- When reading a text, it is important to ask yourself questions about the value of the text. Is this text fact or opinion? If fact, is it true? If opinion, do I agree? Can this writer be trusted? These questions can be shown in a diagram:

- Read the following sentences and decide first if they are fact or opinion. Then decide if the factual sentences are true, and if you agree with the opinions in the other sentences.

	Opinion or fact?	Agree or disagree?	True or false?
a) The USA has the biggest economy in the world
b) Shakespeare wrote textbooks
c) Shakespeare was a great writer
d) Smoking can be dangerous
e) Too many people (32%) smoke in Britain
f) 95% of criminals cannot read
g) Poor education causes 75% of crime

- 3. It can be seen that even short sentences can contain a mixture of fact and opinion. Most longer texts, of course, consist of both.

Read the following and underline facts (____) and opinions (~~~~).

- a) Britain has one of the highest crime rates in the world.
- b) A robbery takes place every five seconds. A car is stolen every minute. Clearly, criminals are not afraid of the police.
- c) Even if they are caught, few criminals ever appear in court.
- d) Most of those who are found guilty are let off with a tiny fine.
- e) To restore law and order, we need many more police and much tougher punishments.

- 4. The previous sentences can be evaluated as follows:

- a) Fact, but only partly true. Britain does not have one of the highest overall crime rates in the world. For some crimes, e.g. car crime, the rate is high, but other countries, e.g. South Africa and the USA, have much higher rates of violent crime.
- b) These facts may or may not be true, but it is not clear from them that criminals are unafraid of the police.
- c) Fact, but not true. A significant number of those arrested are charged and later prosecuted.
- d) This statement is vague. A fine is not letting off. What is meant by tiny?
- e) This is a half-truth. More police would probably help reduce crime, but it is not clear if stronger punishments would have that result.

From this it can be seen that even if the facts are correct, the opinions that are expressed may not be reliable. The evaluation above would suggest that the writer of the original text could not be trusted, and it would be better to look for another source.

- 5. Evaluate the following passages in a similar way. First underline facts and opinion, then decide if the text as a whole is trustworthy.

- a) Every year large numbers of students travel abroad to study at university. Most of them spend thousands of pounds on their degree courses. The cost of travel and accommodation adds significantly to their expenses. But they could save a lot of money by studying their courses online, using the internet and email. Increasing numbers of universities are offering tuition by the internet, and this has many advantages for students. In the future most students are likely to stay at home and study in front of a computer.
- b) London is an ideal city for young students. Britain's lively capital, with a population of two million, is the perfect place to live and study. Cheap, comfortable accommodation is always available, and transport is provided by the clean and reliable underground system. Another advantage is the friendly citizens, who are well-known for their custom of stopping to chat with strangers. Overall, London is probably the best place in the world to study English.

- c) A leading academic has claimed that European unemployment has been made worse by high rates of home ownership. He argues that the growing trend towards owner-occupation is the best explanation for the high rates of unemployment in Europe. This, he argues, is because home owning makes people more reluctant to move if they lose their job. His research suggests that a strong private rented sector is the key to low unemployment. For example, Ireland, where only 9% rent their homes, has an unemployment rate of 8%. At the other extreme, Switzerland has a rental rate of 60%, but only 3% are unemployed.
- d) Global warming affects most people in the world, especially those living in low-lying areas near the sea. It has been predicted that the melting of polar ice may cause the sea to rise by as much as twelve metres by 2050. This would cause flooding in many major coastal cities, such as Tokyo. It has been suggested that the best solution to this problem may be for mankind to become amphibious, like frogs. It is argued that life was originally found in the sea, and so it would merely be a return to our original habitat.
- e) There is shocking new evidence of the effects of heavy alcohol consumption by young people. In Britain in 2000 nearly 800 people under 44 died from cirrhosis of the liver, a condition which is mainly caused by excess drinking. This is over four times higher than the number in 1970. As a result, the government is studying the possibility of compulsory health warnings on alcohol advertising. The growing problem seems to be due to 'binge' drinking among the young, when drinkers deliberately set out to get drunk.

4. Understanding Purpose and Register

Having decided that a text is reliable, a student must read and understand as much as necessary for the needs of the essay. Understanding a text is not just a matter of vocabulary; the reader needs to find out the writer's intentions. Is the writer aiming to inform, persuade, describe or entertain? The answer to this question may affect the way a student uses the material.

1. Compare the two extracts below:

- a) Rebus College is seeking candidates for the position of Treasurer. As the Chief Financial Officer of the College, the Treasurer is responsible for working with the senior administration and Trustees to develop and implement a financial strategic vision for the College.
- b) Are you wondering what to do with that jumper you were given for Christmas that's two sizes too small – or worse, the personal stereo that simply doesn't work? Well, don't worry. Chances are, you'll be able to get your dud gifts swapped, fixed or get a refund. And, armed with our guide to your rights, you'll be able to get any defective products sorted.

The first extract is written to inform the reader about a job vacancy and to give information about the work. The second aims to persuade the reader to buy the guide described. The language style, or register, of the extracts is also very different. The first uses very formal vocabulary such as seeking, position and implement. The second uses an informal tone, the pronoun you, the question form and informal vocabulary such as dud and swapped.

2. Read the following extracts and complete the table using one or two of the following: inform/amuse/persuade/entertain.

Text	Purpose

- a) The lower you are in the office hierarchy, the more disgusting your sandwiches. You can safely assume that a chicken and banana man is not a main board director. Some people, generally those in accounts, have had the same sandwich for the past 30 years. People like to prove how busy they are by eating their sandwich at their desk. But this is counter-productive, because every time you take a mouthful the phone rings, and you'll only get to finish that last mouthful just before you go home.
- b) Writing for publication can be both profitable and enjoyable. It's open to everyone, because you don't need any qualifications. In Britain there is a huge demand for new materials, with thousands of newspapers and magazines published every week. In addition there are TV and radio programmes, the theatre and films. Given this situation, there are many openings for new writers. But the director of one of the UK's main writing colleges, the Writing Academy, advises: 'to enter this market successfully you must have good training'.

- c) The Advertising Standards Authority makes sure that advertising is legal, decent, honest and truthful. The Authority safeguards the public by ensuring that the rules contained in the British Code of Advertising Practice are followed by everyone who prepares and publishes advertisements in the UK, and that advice is freely available to prevent problems arising. The Code lays down what is and is not acceptable in advertisements, except for those on TV and radio.

3. Register.

Compare the tone, or register, of the following:

- a) These apparent failures often result from inadequate planning and management, especially the lack of integration of biophysical and socio-economic information into the effort. The lack of integration of information is, in fact, a limitation that has been emphasised by many authors working with agricultural and land use planning in recent years (see, for instance, Vaughan et al., 1995; and Chidley and Brook, 1997).
- b) It was routine – an ordinary minor operation – except for a single extraordinary point. The patient was on an operating table in Milan. The doctors were in Washington, nearly 6,000 kilometres away. The news that, for the first time, a transatlantic operation had been carried out with a robot doctor in one continent copying the real-time hand movements of a live doctor in another, introduces a new medical age.
- c) Legislation identifies the minimum space of 11 m^3 that should be allocated to each person and should be adhered to especially if much of the room is taken up with essential furniture. Equally, the maximum height of a room is now accepted for such calculations as three metres. For example, in a room $5\text{ m} \times 4\text{ m} \times 3\text{ m}$ (high) this would provide initial space for five persons.

The first extract is an example of academic register, used, for instance, in dissertations and academic journals. This typically uses cautious language like apparent and often, as well as academic vocabulary (biophysical, socio-economic), and will generally include references.

The second passage is journalistic. The first part attempts to interest the reader by presenting the story in a simple but dramatic way (a single extraordinary point). The importance of the news item is stressed by the claim a new medical age. Journalism often uses current idioms like real time.

The last extract uses a very formal tone, suitable for a semi-legal text. Verbs such as identifies, adhered to and allocated, the use of passives (be allocated), and special vocabulary (persons instead of the more normal people) are typical of this register.

- CROSS REFERENCE
- 2.10 Style
3.6 Formality in Verbs
4. Although it can be acceptable to use articles from newspapers, magazines and the internet, which are often more accessible and up to date, in academic work students need to be aware that these sources may have less credibility, and that material written for a wider readership tends to be less detailed.

Students need to be especially careful of taking journalistic phrases and using them in formal essays.

5. Read the following texts and analyse the register in each case, by giving examples of the language used.

- a) Wherever possible complaints should be handled at a local level and without recourse to unduly formal proceedings. It is therefore essential that all staff who have contact with students are aware of the relevant procedures and are empowered to resolve issues as they arise. Staff dealing with complaints are encouraged, whenever practical, to meet with the complainant. Face-to-face discussions are often very helpful to establish the precise cause of dissatisfaction, to explore the remedy sought by the complainant and to foster a mutual understanding of the issues.
- b) Studies of childhood imaginary companions have not yielded clear interactions with age and creativity. It could be suggested that the common assumption of imaginary companions being mainly a preschool phenomenon may have encouraged studies to use very young children as participants. In their review of the literature, Pearson and Mayer (1998) concluded that the experience of imaginary companions peaked in children aged between 2.5 and 3.5 years.
- c) Amazing recent research by David Storey of Warwick University shows that businesses started by older people last longer than those started by younger entrepreneurs. He discovered that 70% of firms started by 50–55-year-olds survived for over three years, but only 30% for those of the 20–25 age group. As the numbers of old folk are increasing rapidly, such ‘grey entrepreneurs’ are likely to become more common. But what’s the secret of their remarkable success rate?

5. Selecting Key Points

After selecting and understanding the most relevant texts, the next step is usually to make notes on the sections of the texts that relate to your topic. Units 5–8 practise this process, which involves a number of inter-linked skills.

CROSS REFERENCE

1.6 Note-Making

1. The first stage of note-making is to identify the key points in the text for your purpose.

Study the following example (key points in italic).

WHY WOMEN LIVE LONGER

Despite the overall increase in life expectancy in Britain over the past century, women still live significantly longer than men. In fact, in 1900 men could expect to live to 49 and women to 52, a difference of three years, while now the figures are 74 and 79, which shows that the gap has increased to five years. Various reasons have been suggested for this situation, such as the possibility that men may die earlier because they take more risks. But a team of British scientists have recently found a likely answer in the immune system, which protects the body from diseases. The thymus is the organ which produces the T cells which actually combat illnesses. Although both sexes suffer from deterioration of the thymus as they age, women appear to have more T cells in their bodies than men of the same age. It is this, the scientists believe, that gives women better protection from potentially fatal diseases such as influenza and pneumonia.

Having selected these sections of the text, you can then go on to make notes from them:

British women live longer than men: 79/74 reasons? new research suggests immune system > thymus > T cells women have more T cells than men = better protection

2. Read the following and then choose a suitable title that expresses the key point.

TITLE:

Dean Kamen is a 50-year-old American eccentric who is also a multi-millionaire. He always wears blue denim shirts and jeans, even when visiting his friend, the president, in the White House. He flies to work by helicopter, which he also uses for visiting his private island off the coast of Connecticut. As an undergraduate Kamen developed the first pump that would give regular doses of medicine to patients. The patent for this and other original medical inventions has produced a huge income, allowing him to run his own research company which, among many other projects, has produced the iBot, the world's first wheelchair which can climb stairs.

3. In the following text, three key points are in italic. Decide on their order of importance.

HOT RUBBISH

a) The majority of people in the small Derbyshire village of Poolsbrook have joined a scheme to make power from rubbish. b) Methane gas will be collected from the local rubbish tip and will be used to heat houses more cheaply and generate electricity. The villagers, who have been affected by the closure of the local coal mines, suffer from unemployment, so cheap heating is especially important for them. They have raised the £2 million cost from development agencies. c) The new system, which will be the first of its kind in Europe, will lead to a healthier environment by cutting CO₂ emissions, and should also create three full-time jobs.

THE SIXTH WAVE?

Lord May, the president of the Royal Society, has claimed that the world is facing a wave of extinctions similar to the five mass extinctions of past ages. He calculates that the current rate of extinction is between 100 and 1,000 times faster than the historical average. The cause of previous extinctions, such as the one which killed the dinosaurs, is uncertain, but was probably an external event such as collision with a comet.

However the present situation is caused by human consumption of plants, which has resulted in a steady increase in agriculture and a consequent reduction in habitat for animals. Although many people are still hungry, food production has increased by 100% since 1965.

Lord May also pointed out that it was very difficult to make accurate estimates as nobody knew how many species of animals lived on the planet. So far 1.5 million species had been named, but the true figure might be as high as 100 million. Our ignorance of this made it almost impossible to work out the actual rate of extinction. However, the use of intelligent guesses suggests that losses over the past century were comparable with the extinctions of earlier periods, evidence of which is found in the fossil record.

5. When preparing to write an essay you may be concerned with only one aspect of a text, so your key points should relate only to the topic you are examining.

- a) You are preparing to write an essay on 'Marketing – art or science?' Read the text below and underline the sections relevant to your essay.

BOTTLED WATER UNDER ATTACK

The Water Companies Association (WCA) has claimed that bottled water costs 700 times more than tap water, but is often of inferior quality. The chief executive of the WCA pointed out that although bottled water advertising often associated the product with sport and health there was no truth in this link. The reality, she said, was that the packaging of bottled water was environmentally damaging, since millions of empty bottles had to be disposed of in rubbish tips. 2% of samples of bottled water failed a purity test conducted by the Drinking Water Inspectorate, while only 0.3% of tap water samples failed the same test. Labels on bottled water often referred to ‘spring’ and ‘natural water’, which were meaningless phrases. In addition, bottled water was imported from as far as Korea and Kenya, which was a waste of resources. These criticisms, however, were rejected by the British Soft Drinks Association, which argued that bottled water was a successful business founded on giving the customers choice, quality and convenience.

NEW LIGHT ON THE PLAGUE

The plague, which first struck Europe in the sixth century, was one of the great disasters of history. In the fourteenth century it became the Black Death, when it may have killed one third of the entire population. The microbe that causes the disease lives on rats, and is passed on to humans by the bite of a flea. It still survives today, though outbreaks are less deadly: the World Health Organisation receives reports of 3,000 cases annually. Scientists believe that the microbe was originally a stomach infection, but evolved into a more lethal disease about 1,500 years ago.

Now the genetic code of the plague bacterium has been ‘read’ by scientists; a total of 465 million ‘letters’ of DNA. They believe that this will help in the development of vaccines for the plague, one of which has begun clinical trials. In parts of Africa drug-resistant strains of the disease have evolved, which gives added importance to the work, as does the threat that the plague might be used as an agent of bacteriological warfare.

6. Note-Making

Effective note-making is a key writing skill, with a number of practical uses. Good note-making techniques lead to accurate essays. Although you are the only person who will read your notes, clarity and organisation are still important.

1. What are the main reasons for note-making?

Add to the ideas below.

3. You are writing an essay on 'Conservation at sea'. You find the following article in a magazine called Science South, volume 27 (2002). The author is J. Doyle. Read the text (key points in italic) and make notes.

STUDYING SQUID

Before the British occupation of the Falkland Islands in 1833 most of the sailors who went there were mainly interested in collecting oil and skins from the whales, seals and penguins which flourished in the South Atlantic. The British introduced sheep farming, but since this became less profitable after the 1960s the islanders have been forced to pay more attention to the contents of the island waters.

These waters are rich in squid, and the sale of fishing licences for this harvest has funded research to allow the stocks to be managed efficiently. There are two kinds of squid around the Falklands; Illex is eaten in East Asia, while Loligo is popular in Spain. The latter was found to breed at two periods in the year; one season is May to July and the other is October and November. This second period, which is summer in the South Atlantic, coincides with the local penguin breeding season and makes the baby squid more vulnerable. As a result, the scientists suggested that the fishing season for Loligo should be postponed for a few months to allow the stock to recover, and when this was done the fishermen found that they had a better catch than before.

The other squid, Illex, was found to have a different pattern, swimming south from Brazil to the Falklands in summer, and then back north again. To deal with a species that migrates through the waters of several countries it has been necessary to set up an agreement between the governments concerned to restrict the fishing season in order to allow squid numbers to build up.

- 5. You have been told to write an essay on 'Malaria – can it be controlled?' You decide to make notes on the following article from a magazine called Medical Report (Volume 34 1998, pp. 78–86). The author's name is Irene Nemecova. Make notes on the whole text in the box below.

MALARIA FIGHTS BACK

Drug-resistant strains of malaria, already one of the world's major killers, are steadily spreading across the globe. The deadly strains have established themselves in South East Asia and South America, and have recently begun to spread across India and Africa. Formerly under control in many areas, the disease now threatens two billion people living in more than 100 countries.

Estimates suggest that there are now more than 350 million cases of malaria a year – a total four times the level of the early 1970s. In Africa alone the disease kills one million children each year.

Several factors are responsible for this disturbing development. Spreading world poverty has deprived nations of funds for sanitation, so that many health projects have been stopped, while increased movements of migrant workers and tourists have carried infections more rapidly from one country to another. At the same time, the overuse of drugs, especially antibiotics, has led to the establishment of resistant strains of diseases.

As well as this, hopes that genetic engineers might soon develop the world's first malaria vaccine, a long-sought goal, have been questioned recently by several scientists. 'There are so many strains of malaria parasite,' said one scientist, 'and each is able to alter its chemical surface and trick its way past the body's defences. We'd need a remarkable vaccine to cope with that. However, a malaria vaccine is now undergoing human trials and may be available for use if proved successful.'

6. You are preparing to write an essay on 'The impact of climate on history'. The text below is taken from page 221 of a book called Volcanic Disasters by E.B. Pitnam, published in 1993. Underline the relevant points and make notes.

One of the greatest explosions in modern history occurred in 1815, when an Indonesian volcano called Mt. Tambora blew up. The eruption involved about 100 cubic kilometres of material being blown into the sky, with huge loss of life both on land and sea. Large quantities of volcanic dust were ejected into the atmosphere, and this dust gradually spread around the world, causing alarming events on the other side of the world.

In New England in north eastern USA farmers were hit by bitterly cold weather in June and July 1816. Much of the harvest was lost due to repeated waves of frost and snow in the middle of summer. The same pattern was recorded in Europe, where agriculture was still suffering the effects of the Napoleonic Wars. In France wheat prices reached their highest point of the century in 1817.

As European demand for food rose, prices doubled in America. Although some profited from the shortages, others were driven to emigrate into the unexplored lands to the west. Numbers leaving Vermont, for example, increased by 100% between 1816–17.

7. Paraphrasing

Paraphrasing involves changing a text so that it is quite dissimilar to the source yet retains all the meaning. This skill is useful in several areas of academic work, but this unit focuses on using paraphrasing in note-making and summary writing. Effective paraphrasing is vital in academic writing to avoid the risk of plagiarism.

1. Although paraphrasing techniques are used in summary writing, paraphrasing does not aim to shorten the length of a text, merely to restate the text.

For example,

Evidence of a lost civilisation has been found off the coast of China.

could be paraphrased:

Remains of an ancient society have been discovered in the sea near China.

Read the text below and then decide which is the best paraphrase, (a) or (b).

Ancient Egypt collapsed in about 2180 BC. Studies conducted of the mud from the River Nile showed that at this time the mountainous regions which feed the Nile suffered from a prolonged drought. This would have had a devastating effect on the ability of Egyptian society to feed itself.

- a) The sudden ending of Egyptian civilisation over 4,000 years ago was probably caused by changes in the weather in the region to the south. Without the regular river flooding there would not have been enough food.
- b) Research into deposits of the Egyptian Nile indicate that a long dry period in the mountains at the river's source may have led to a lack of water for irrigation around 2180BC, which was when the collapse of Egyptian society began.

3. Techniques.

c) The research team divided 50 insomnia sufferers into three groups.

d) One group was told to imagine a waterfall, while another group tried sheep counting.

5. Change the word class of the words in italic, and then re-write the sentences.

a) A third group was given no special instructions about going to sleep.

Example:

A third group was not specially instructed about going to sleep.

b) It was found that the group thinking of waterfalls fell asleep 20 minutes quicker.

c) Mechanical tasks like counting sheep are apparently too boring to make people sleepy.

6. Change the word order of the following sentences.

a) There are many practical applications to research into insomnia.

Example:

Research into insomnia has many practical applications.

b) About one in ten people are thought to suffer from severe insomnia.

c) It is calculated that the cost of insomnia for the American economy may be $35 billion a year.

7. Combine all these techniques to paraphrase the paragraph as fully as possible.

8. Use the same techniques to paraphrase the following text.

Before the last century no humans had visited Antarctica, and even today the vast continent has a winter population of less than 200 people. However, a recent report from a New Zealand government agency outlines the scale of the pollution problem in the ice and snow. Although untouched compared with other regions in the world, the bitter cold of Antarctica means that the normal process of decay is prevented. As a result some research stations are surrounded by the rubbish of nearly 60 years' operations.

Despite popular belief, the polar continent is really a desert, with less precipitation than the Sahara. In the past, snowfall slowly covered the waste left behind, like beer cans or dead ponies, but now, possibly due to global warming, the ice is thinning and these are being exposed. Over 10 years ago the countries using Antarctica agreed a treaty on waste disposal, under which everything is to be taken home, and this is slowly improving the situation.

However, the scientists do not want everything removed. The remains of very early expeditions at the beginning of the twentieth century have acquired historical value and will be preserved.

8. Summary Writing

Making summaries is a common activity in everyday life. If a friend asks us about a book we are reading, we do not tell them about everything in the book. Instead, we make a summary of the most interesting and important aspects. The same principle applies to summarising in academic writing.

1. Choose four of the topics below and write summaries in no more than twelve words each.

Example:

Birmingham is a large industrial city in the English West Midlands.

- a) Your home town
- b) Bill Gates
- c) Your academic subject
- d) The last book you read
- e) A film you saw recently
- f) Your mother/father

Look at the summaries you have written above. What are the features of a successful summary?

2. Summary writing is an important skill in academic work.

Different kinds of summaries are needed in different situations.

List as many study uses for summary writing as you can think of.

3. In essay writing students often have to summarise part of a book or journal article.

The summary may be just one or two sentences, to explain the main idea of the article, and perhaps compare it with another summarised text, or it might be necessary to include much more detail. In other words, a summary can range from 1–2% of the original to more than 50%: summarising is a flexible tool.

At first students need to follow a series of steps to summarise successfully. With practice the number of steps may be reduced, as the process becomes more automatic.

Complete the list of stages in a successful summary.

- a) Read the text carefully and check key vocabulary.
- b) Underline or highlight the
- c) Make notes of these, taking care to
- d) Write the summary using the notes, re-organising the
- e) Check the summary to make sure no have been omitted or distorted.

4. Read the following text and compare the summaries. Decide which is best, giving reasons.

Researchers in France and the United States have recently reported that baboons are able to think abstractly. It has been known for some time that chimpanzees are capable of abstract thought, but baboons are a more distant relation to mankind. In the experiment, scientists trained two baboons to use a personal computer and a joystick. The animals had to match computer designs which were basically the same but had superficial differences. The baboons performed better than would be expected by chance. The researchers describe their study in an article in the Journal of Experimental Psychology.

Indian researchers are trying to find out if there is any truth in old sayings which claim to predict the weather. In Gujarat farmers have the choice of planting either peanuts, which are more profitable in wet years, or castor, which does better in drier conditions. The difference depends on the timing of the monsoon rains, which can arrive at any time between the beginning and the middle of June. Farmers, however, have to decide what seeds to sow in April or May.

There is a local saying, at least a thousand years old, which claims that the monsoon starts 45 days after the flowering of a common tree, Cassia fistula. Dr Kanani, an agronomist from Gujarat Agricultural University, has been studying the relationship since 1996, and has found that the tree does successfully predict the approximate date of the monsoon's arrival.

Owen (1998) also notes that the female subculture is based on personal relationships with other women inmates. Others, however, believe that the subculture in women's prisons is undergoing a gradual shift that more closely resembles that of male prisons. 2. Below are two sources used for an essay titled 'Should genetically modified (GM) foods have a role in future agriculture?' Read the sources first, then the essay extract.

Genetic modification (GM) is the most recent application of biotechnology to food, which can also be called genetic engineering or genetic manipulation. The phrase 'Genetically Modified Organisms' or GMOs is used frequently in the scientific literature to describe plants and animals which have had DNA introduced into them by means other than the 'natural' process of an egg and a sperm.

New species have always evolved through natural selection by means of random genetic variation. Early farmers used this natural variation to selectively breed wild animals, plants and even micro-organisms such as yogurt cultures and yeasts. They produced domesticated variants better suited to the needs of humans, long before the scientific basis for the process was understood. Despite this long history of careful improvement, such procedures are now labelled 'interfering with nature'.

Genetic modification (GM) is in fact far more than a mere development of selective breeding techniques. Combining genetic material from species that cannot breed naturally is an interference in areas which may be highly dangerous. The consequences of this kind of manipulation cannot be foreseen.

It seems undeniable that these processes may lead to major benefits in food production and the environment. There is no doubt, for example, that some medical advances may have saved millions of lives. However, this level of technology can contain a strong element of risk.

Our ignorance of the long-term effects of releasing GM plants or even animals into the environment means that this step should only be taken after very careful consideration.

ESSAY EXTRACT

It has been claimed that GM technology is no different from breeding techniques which have been practised by man for thousands of years. Source A states that this process is similar to natural selection and remarks: 'such procedures are now labelled "interfering with nature"'. On the other hand Source B considers that, although GM technology could bring considerable benefits in medicine and agriculture, it is quite different to traditional processes of selection. He believes that crossing the species barrier is a dangerous step and that there is insufficient knowledge of the long-term results of such developments.

4. You are preparing to write an essay titled 'The social effects of tourism in developing countries'. Read the sources and then complete the paragraph comparing their views.

SOURCE C

When countries begin to provide facilities for mass tourism, such as hotels and leisure complexes, there is an immediate demand for labour. Work is created for cleaners, waiters, gardeners and drivers on a scale which may significantly boost the local economy. Such work may provide opportunities to learn valuable new skills. For many, these semi-skilled jobs provide an attractive alternative to subsistence agriculture or fishing, while at the same time the tax revenues from their earnings increase the national income.

SOURCE D

One inevitable feature of tourism's growth is the creation of badly-paid, seasonal jobs in holiday resorts. Much of this work combines insecurity with long hours of work in poor conditions. In Thailand, for example, there are cases of hotel maids working 15 hour days for less than $4. Moreover, the combination of wealthy tourists being served by exploited waitresses is likely to increase social tensions in these areas. Another risk is that natural or human disasters such as wars and earthquakes may drive visitors away without warning, leaving tens of thousands unemployed.

It has been claimed that the development of tourism played a major part in helping to modernise parts of Franco's Spain in the 1960s. The presence of easy-going, affluent visitors apparently encouraged the locals to learn new skills and open new businesses. Despite this positive interpretation, many examples could be presented where the arrival of rich and idle tourists has been an encouragement for crime, prostitution and other less desirable aspects of the modern economy. Much seems to depend on the economic alternatives offered by the society, and of course the scale of tourist arrivals.

It has been argued that tourism can have a very positive social influence on a developing country.

10. Planning a Text

Outline planning was examined in Unit 2. Planning gives essays a coherent structure and, most importantly, helps to ensure that they answer the question set. Although all essays need planning, they are written in two different situations: as coursework, and in exams. Clearly, under the time pressure of an exam, planning is more hurried, but also more critical. This unit looks at planning first in exams and then for coursework.

11. Organising Paragraphs

Paragraphs are the basic building blocks of texts. Well-organised paragraphs not only help readers understand the argument; they also help writers to structure their ideas effectively.

1. Read the following paragraph.

The way we use banks is currently changing. This is partly because of the introduction of new technology in the last ten years. The personal computer and the internet, for instance, allow customers to view their accounts at home and perform operations such as moving money between accounts. At the same time banks are being reorganised in ways that affect both customers and staff. In the past five years over 3,000 bank branches have closed in Britain. The banks have discovered that staffing call centres is cheaper than running a branch network.

The structure of the paragraph is:

1. topic sentence	The way we use banks ...
2. reason	This is partly because ...
3. example	The personal computer ...
4. details	At the same time banks ...
5. further details	In the past five ...
6. reason	The banks have discovered ...

2. A paragraph is a collection of sentences that deal with one subject.

All paragraphs contain a topic sentence, which is often, but not always, the first. Other components vary according to the nature of the topic. Introductory paragraphs often contain definitions, and descriptive paragraphs include a lot of detail. Other sentences give examples and offer reasons and restatements.

3. Read and analyse the following paragraph.

In recent years all British universities have adopted the semester system. A semester is a period of time which lasts for half the academic year. Semester 1, for example, starts in September and finishes in January. Previously the academic year had been divided into three terms: autumn, winter and spring. Most courses consist of modules that last for one semester, and exams are held at the end of each. Britain began using semesters to make it easier for international students to move from one country to another.

12. Organising the Main Body

This and the next two units deal with the organisation of the main body, the introduction and the conclusion. In the case of longer assignments it is often better to write the main body before the introduction. With shorter essays, for example in exams, this is impractical, and the introduction has to be written first.

1. The structure of the main body depends on the length of the essay and the subject of study.

Longer essays may include the following sections:

Experimental set-up – a technical description of the organisation of an experiment

Methods – how the research was carried out

Findings/results – what was discovered by the research/experiment

Case study – a description of an example of the topic being researched

Discussion – an examination of the issues and the writer's verdict

2. The sections below comprise the main body of an essay titled 'Studying abroad: an analysis of costs and benefits'. Decide on the heading of each section and the best order for them.

- Comparisons of the advantages and disadvantages that students mentioned about study abroad and an attempt to decide if most students benefited from the experience.
- Detailed description of the survey carried out by the researcher.
- An extensive study of two students (from different cultures) studying in Britain who were interviewed by the researcher.
- A report of what the survey found, with statistical analysis.

3. Shorter essays (in exams, for example) tend to have simpler structures:

Description/development A → B → C → D

Comparison/evaluation J → K → L
 J₁ K₁ L₁
 J₂ K₂ L₂

Match the examples of plans for main bodies below to the structures above.

- Prisons make criminals worse, and should be abolished – Discuss.
 - benefit of prisons – deterrence
 - benefit of prisons – removes dangerous people from society

- iii) drawback of prisons – prisoners lose contact with non-criminal society
- iv) drawback of prisons – prisoners become bitter and learn criminal techniques
- b) In the UK, radio is gaining audience while TV is losing viewers. Consider possible reasons.
 - i) radio can be listened to in many situations
 - ii) radio offers a wide variety of programme types
 - iii) radio does not demand full attention, e.g. background music
 - iv) TV lacks flexibility, needs full attention
 - v) economic factors: TV more expensive to buy/programmes more expensive to make
 - vi) high production costs may result in poor quality of programmes

4. Inside the main body, ideas need to be presented in the most logical fashion, linked together to form a coherent argument.

Re-organise the notes below to achieve the best structure.

- a) Trace the development of the factory system and evaluate its social impact.
 - workers forced to adopt a regular timetable to maintain production
 - first factories employed unskilled workers; often women and children
 - early employers enforced strict codes of discipline
 - factories originally sited to make use of water power (in 18th C.)
 - later some employers offered social benefits, e.g. housing/education
 - in nineteenth century factories built near canals/railways for access to markets
- b) Lowering the minimum school leaving age to 14 would allow teachers to focus on teaching the students who wanted to be in school – Discuss.
 - if they left at 14, students would be unlikely to find proper jobs
 - some students more suited to work that doesn't require qualifications
 - problem students waste everybody's time, including their own
 - effort should be made in primary schools to prevent pupils falling behind
 - many older students have lost interest in learning and disrupt classes
 - in future, almost all jobs will demand academic skills

3.5 Conjunctions

5. It is useful to mark the beginning of new paragraphs or the introduction of new subjects with special phrases.

To introduce a new paragraph/topic:

The main/chief factor/issue is ...

Turning to the subject of ...

Moving on to the question of ...

Another important area is ...

..... must also be examined

To add information inside a paragraph:

- a) Firstly, ... The first point ... In the first place ...
- b) Secondly, ... Next, Then, ... In addition ...
Moreover ...
- c) Finally, ... Lastly,...

6. Complete with suitable phrases the following extract from an essay on 'British weather'.

The British are famous all over the world for their obsession with the weather, but in fact the reality is more complex than people often believe. This essay sets out to examine some of the principal influences on the weather of the British Isles.

..... is the geographical position of Britain, situated on the extreme western edge of the European continent. This means that a variety of weather types can dominate the country. the Atlantic Ocean can produce warm wet winds, especially in winter. the land mass of Europe can create anticyclonic weather, hot in summer and cold in winter. the polar region to the north can generate cold winds at most seasons of the year.

..... variations within Britain, there are significant differences between regions. the south of England can be much warmer than the north of Scotland, especially in winter. the west of Britain is usually much wetter than the east. even in the same district, hilly areas will be cooler and wetter than the lowlands.

..... is seasonal change, which in Britain is less distinct than in many countries. the Atlantic moderates extreme types of weather, and the weather pattern can change radically from year to year. As a result warm days in winter and chilly summer winds frequently surprise visitors to this country.

13. Introductions

An introduction is crucial, not just for what it says about the topic, but for what it tells the reader about the writer's style and approach. Unless you can introduce the subject clearly the reader may not wish to continue.

1. What is the purpose of the introduction to an essay?

Choose from the items below:

- a) to define some of the terms in the title
- b) to give your opinion of the subject
- c) to show that you have read some research on the subject
- d) to show that the subject is worth writing about
- e) to explain which areas of the subject you will deal with
- f) to get the reader's attention with a provocative idea
- g) to show how you intend to organise your essay

2.4 Definitions

2. It may be necessary to clarify some of the words in the title.

This is to make it clear that you understand the title.

Discuss the impact of privatisation on the British economy.

Privatisation is the process of transferring certain industries from state control to the private sector, which began in Britain in 1981 with British Telecom ...

3. In longer assignments it is important to show that you are familiar with current research.

This can be demonstrated using phrases such as:

A number of researchers have examined this issue, notably ...

Various investigations have explored the subject, especially ...

4. You must show the importance of the topic.

This can be either in the academic world or as a contemporary issue of wider relevance.

As privatisation is increasingly seen as a remedy for economic ills in many other countries, it is worth examining its impact in Britain, which was a pioneer in this process.

5. As you are writing only an essay, not a book, it is obviously not possible to deal with all aspects of your subject.

Therefore you need to explain what limits you are setting on the discussion, and possibly give reasons for this.

Only privatisations completed between 1981 and 1992 will be dealt with, as it is too soon to assess the impact of later developments.

6. For your own benefit, as well as the reader's, it is useful to outline how the essay will be organised.

An assessment will first be made of the performance of the privatised industries themselves, on an individual basis, and then the performance of the economy as a whole will be examined.

7. Study the following extracts from introductions below and decide which of the functions in the box they fulfil.

- i) explain starting point for research
- ii) state aims/goals
- iii) refer to recent research in same area
- iv) give results of research
- v) provide background information
- vi) concede limitations

- a) In many companies, the knowledge of most employees remains untapped for solving problems and generating new ideas.
- b) This paper positions Call Centres at the core of the mix of technologies public administration can use to innovate e-commerce.
- c) In fact, this is one of our main findings based on an extended sample period up to 1998.
- d) Admittedly, the tenor of my argument is tentative and exploratory.
- e) The purpose of this paper is to investigate changes in the incidence of extreme warm and cold temperatures over the globe since 1870.
- f) To what extent do increases in the food available per person at a national level contribute to reductions in child malnutrition? This question has generated a wide range of responses (Haddad et al., 1997).

8. There is no such thing as a standard introduction, and much depends on the nature of the research and the length of the essay.

However, for a relatively short essay written under exam conditions the following are worth including, in this order.

- a) Definitions of any terms in the title that are unclear
- b) Some background information
- c) Reference to other writers who have discussed this topic
- d) Your purpose in writing and the importance of the subject
- e) The points you are going to make/areas you are going to cover

2.5 Discussion

9. Prepare to write an introduction to an essay with the title 'Higher education should be available to everyone – Discuss' by answering the questions below.

- a) Which terms in the title might need defining?
- b) What background information could you give?
- c) How can you show the relevance of this topic, in either Britain or another country?
- d) How are you going to limit your discussion, geographically, historically or both?
- e) How will you organise the main body of the essay?

As this is a short essay, it is not necessary to mention sources in the introduction.

10. Write the introduction (about 100 words), using your answers from (9) and the notes provided below.

definition	higher education (HE) = university education
background	increasing demand for HE worldwide puts pressure on national budgets > many states seek to shift costs to students relevance	in most countries degree = key to better jobs & opportunities discussion points	if sts. have to pay more of cost, discriminates against poorer families; how to keep HE open to able students from all backgrounds?

11. Write an introduction to an essay on one of the following subjects, or choose a subject from your own discipline.
- Compare the urbanisation process in the First and the Third Worlds.
 - Assess the importance of public transport in the modern city.
 - 'Lawyers are inflating the cost of medicine' – Discuss.
 - To what extent is a democratic system necessary for economic development?

14. Conclusions

There is usually a link between the starting point, i.e. the title, and the conclusion. If the title is asking a question, the conclusion should contain the answer. The reader may look at the conclusion first to get a quick idea of the main arguments or points.

1. Not every academic essay has a conclusion.

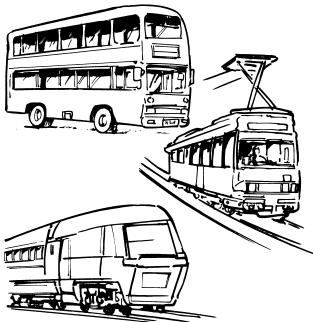

In some cases it may be linked to the discussion section, or it may be called concluding remarks, or summary. However, in most cases it is helpful for the reader to have a section that (quite briefly) looks back at what has been said and makes some comments about the main part.

Read the following extracts from conclusions and match them with the list of functions in the box.

- a) In this review, attempts have been made to summarise and assess the current research trends of transgenic rice dealing exclusively with agronomically important genes.
- b) As always, this investigation has a number of limitations to be considered in evaluating its findings.
- c) Obviously, business expatriates could benefit from being informed that problem-focused coping strategies are more effective than symptom-focused ones.
- d) Another line of research worth pursuing further is to study the importance of language for expatriate assignments.
- e) Our review of 13 studies of strikes in public transport demonstrates that the effect of a strike on public transport ridership varies and may either be temporary or permanent.
- f) These results of the Colombia study reported here are consistent with other similar studies conducted in other countries (Baron & Norman, 1992).
- g) To be more precise, there was a positive relation between tolerant and patient problem solving and all four measures of adjustment: general, interaction, work and subjective well-being.
- h) To empirically test this conjecture, we need more cross-national replication of this research.

- i) comparisons with other studies
- ii) summary of main body
- iii) limitations of research
- iv) suggestions for further research
- v) practical implications and proposals

2. Compare the following conclusions to two essays on 'Public transport in a modern economy'. Complete the table to show the main differences between them.

- a) As has been shown, public transport is likely to play an important role in the future. Despite possible changes in patterns of work and leisure, it seems possible that mass transport systems will remain necessary for the efficient movement of people. What is not clear is how such transport systems should be funded. Various schemes have been discussed, but the most effective model will probably contain some element of public funding. Market forces alone are unlikely to provide a satisfactory solution.
- b) In such a brief study it is hard to draw definite conclusions about the future shape of public transport. The main areas of debate have been outlined, but much more research is needed before firm recommendations can be made. It can be seen that this is a controversial area, with strong protagonists on either side. Whether public transport flourishes or deteriorates in future is still unclear, though further studies may eventually suggest an answer.

3. The following may be found in conclusions. Decide on the most suitable order for them (A–E).

Implications of the findings
Proposals for further research
Limitations of the research

4. Below are notes for the main body of an essay. Read the notes and complete the conclusion, using your own ideas if necessary.

Cultural adaptation among overseas students at a British university.

a) The research programme

purpose: to study how students from different cultural backgrounds adapt to academic life in the UK size and method: 250 questionnaires returned (30% Chinese, 25% SE Asian, 20% Middle Eastern, 25% other)

- b) Findings – culture was only one factor in determining successful adaptation.
Other important factors: age/previous experience of living abroad/language proficiency
- c) Discussion – how accurate was research? How could it have been improved? What can be done to help students adapt better?

summary	The aim of the study was to explore differing degrees of adjustment to life at a British university among overseas students from a variety of cultural backgrounds. 250 valid questionnaires were completed, representing about a third of the overseas student population, with significant numbers of Chinese, SE Asian and Middle Eastern students. 4.4 Comparison Essay

5. Study the notes for the essay below and write a conclusion in about 100 words.

A comparison of classroom learning with internet-based teaching.

- a) Reasons for increasing use of online education:
 - cheaper if large numbers involved
 - allows students to study in their own time
 - students do not have to travel to university
- b) Reasons why classroom-based education remains popular:
 - students can be part of group; receive support and advice; learn from colleagues
 - students have face-to-face contact with a teacher
 - is seen as traditional and effective
- c) Discussion
 - can a solitary student in front of a computer enjoy the same learning experience as a member of a class?
 - pressure of numbers in universities makes more online education likely
 - is internet learning really a new method of education? Distance learning has been popular for many years (e.g. Open University)

15. Re-reading and Re-writing

When you have finished the conclusion it may be tempting to hand in your work immediately. However, it is almost certain that it can be improved by being revised. With longer assignments, it may be worth asking a classmate to give an opinion.

1. After finishing the first draft of an essay you should, if you have time, wait for a while and then re-read the essay, asking the following questions.
 - a) How well does this answer the question in the title?
 - b) Have I forgotten any points that would strengthen the development?
 - c) Is it clearly structured and well linked together?

2. Read this short essay written by a Japanese student to the title 'Compare the university system in your country with the British system'. Answer the questions above by making notes below.

CROSS REFERENCE

2.3 Comparisons

It is said that there are large differences in the teaching methods between British universities and Japanese ones. Courses in British universities consist mainly of lectures, discussions, presentations and tutorials and students study specifically their major subject. On the other hand, Japanese universities normally have only lectures in the first two years and students have to study a wide range of subjects in addition to their major. The aim of this essay is to compare and analyse each system.

In British universities, students need a more active attitude in their study than Japanese students. They need to prepare for presentations and discussions. This is useful for learning because they take much time for study outside the classroom and as they become familiar with their subjects they will become more interested in them.

In Japan, students' attitude is amazingly passive and they study only just before exams.

The other difference between British universities and Japanese ones is, as mentioned above, British students concentrate on their major subject and gain specific knowledge about it. Japanese students, however, gain wider knowledge by studying a few other subjects in addition to their major. This system gives students apparently much knowledge but they cannot study their major deeply and their knowledge is wide-ranging but not useful.

In conclusion, British teaching methods give students more chance to know the subject thoroughly compared to Japanese teaching methods, but Japanese methods are suitable for students who are eager to gain a wide range of knowledge and like to study on their own. It is hard to say which is better; it depends on students.

- b)
- c)

3. A careful re-reading of the essay would suggest the following points.

- a) The essay only partly answers the title. It looks at university life from a student's position, but does not really deal with the system as a whole. The last line of the conclusion discusses a question not asked in the title.
- b) To deal with the subject more fully the writer needs to examine topics such as length of courses, funding of students, and admission procedures. If there is not space to discuss these in detail they must be at least mentioned, to show that the writer is aware that they are central to the subject.
- c) The introduction needs to be more general. It goes straight to a comparison of teaching methods. This could be in the main body. Otherwise the essay is well organised and quite logical.

5. Read this extract from the main body of an essay on 'Education is the most important factor in national development – Discuss'. Study the notes below and then re-write the extract.

The need for education is crucial in any field. a) It is something that no one can deny. b) The development in technology has provided us with many devices and machines that facilitate our lives. Nowadays, factories produce more in less time and that helps the economies of countries. The different scientific discoveries have improved the quality of life as well. The development in the medical field is an example; vaccines and antibiotics have saved many lives. Take Japan, a country with few natural riches, where most of the land is mountains, but it is now one of the strongest countries economically. c) The natural poverty of Japan has, in fact, been overcome by education and it has become one of the most important countries in a short period of time.

- a) This sentence repeats the idea in the first, but doesn't add anything new.
- b) Not clear how this section relates to the subject. No clear link is established between education and technology.
- c) The case for linking Japanese development and education is not established – the claim is too strong. Other factors need to be considered.

16. Proof-Reading

The vital final part of the writing process, proof-reading can prevent confusion and misunderstanding of your work. Although most word-processing programmes check your spelling, they will not detect other common types of mistakes.

*The following examples each contain one common type of error.
Underline the error and match it to the list of error types in the box.*

- i) factual; ii) word ending; iii) punctuation; iv) tense;
- v) vocabulary; vi) spelling; vii) singular/plural; viii) style;
- ix) missing word; x) unnecessary word

2. When proof-reading, it is a good idea to exchange texts with another student, since you may become over-familiar with your own work.

However, even in exam conditions, when this is not possible, it is vital to spend a few minutes checking through your work, for this may reveal careless errors that can be quickly corrected.

Underline and correct the errors in the extracts below (one or two in each).

- a) The graph shows changes in the number of prisoners over five years (1930–1980).
- b) ... the way the government prepares his citizens to contribute in the development ...

- d) However, weather it is the most important factor is the issue ...
- e) There has been a sharp decrease between 1930 and 1950.
- f) The quality of a society depends in the education level.
- g) America had the biggest figure for crime.

3. Proof-reading a longer text is more difficult.

The following was written by a student who was asked to describe his background and future plans.

Underline the errors and then write in suitable corrections.

NB. As the subject is personal, a relatively informal style is acceptable here.

I come from China, which is a very traditional country. I think before give my own situation and plan, I have to say something about my country, because her cultures effect me very much. My country has 5,000 years history, so in my brain there are a lot of thing which is from it.

When I first arrived UK I studied in Cambridge, which is the best university all over the world. Although I just studied in a language school in Cambridge, I felt so good. I learned a lot not only from the school but also from the Cambridge society. That is why I choose Cambridge to learn my foundation course. The foundation course just for oversea studies to improve their English.

I would like to study buiness, because when China join in WTO, my country will need a lot of people who know business very well. So I will choose business foundation course, computer and mathematics, because computer is very useful in modern society. In the future course I think the big problem is vocabulary, so I am planning to remember as many as I can. I will spend more time on mathematics, because I never learn it before.

Another problem is to finish the homework in time. Sometimes I think the homework is no useful for me, so I just leave it, which is a bad customer. The last and the big is homesick, which always slow down my progress, but studying broad is my own choice, I have to try my best.

2. Elements of Writing

Student Introduction

The Elements of Writing are the various skills that are needed for most types of academic writing, whether a short report, a longer essay or a dissertation. Many essays, for example, begin by defining a term in the title (Unit 4), then make some generalisations about the subject (Unit 7), before going on to provide examples of the main areas the writer wishes to examine (Unit 6). Throughout the essay the writer needs to provide references to sources used (Unit 9) and to employ an appropriate academic style (Unit 10). Most academic subjects also require discussion of numbers (Unit 8), and graphs and charts (Unit 12). The model essays in Part 4 provide examples of how these various elements are employed in one text (Part 4 Unit 4).

In the case of Units 3 and 5 (Comparisons and Discussion), students should note that the comparison or discussion might apply to the overall pattern of the essay or to just one section. It is common, for instance, for longer essays to have a discussion section before the conclusion. In either case similar structures can be used.

There is no fixed order for working on the units in Elements of Writing. They are organised alphabetically for easy access, but most students will have their own priorities. Business students, for example, might choose to begin by working on Visual Information (Unit 12).

WHY WOMEN LIVE LONGER

Some British scientists now believe that women live longer than men a) T cells, a vital part of the immune system that protects the body from diseases. Previously, various theories have attempted to explain longer female life expectancy. Biologists claimed that women lived longer b) they need to bring up children. Others argued that men take more risks, c) they die earlier. But a team from Imperial College think that the difference may be d) women having better immune systems. Having studied a group of men and women they found that the body produces fewer T cells as it gets older, e) the ageing process. However, they admit that this may not be the only factor, and f) another research project may be conducted.

5. Study the flowchart and complete the paragraph that describes it.

It is achieved by several methods, such as the use of conjunctions. Another is the linking of phrases and sentences with words like he, they and that which refer back to something mentioned before:

Jane Austen wrote six major novels in her short life. They deal with

5. Complete these paragraphs with suitable reference words from the table in (1).

A) The Victoria and Albert Museum is in South Kensington in London. a) is named after Queen Victoria and b) husband, Prince Albert. c) was made Queen in 1837, and married d) three years later. e) had a happy marriage which produced nine children. f) life together was quite simple, although g) was the queen of the world's most powerful nation. Albert had a serious character, and perhaps h) major achievement was to organise the Great Exhibition of 1851, the profits from which helped to build the Museum.

B) One group of commentators have little faith in the ability of food availability to improve child nutrition. a) arguments are supported by the fact that over two-thirds of malnourished children live in countries with food supplies adequate for b) population's needs. c) point to problems of poverty and to non-food factors, such as children's health and the quality of d) care. e) belief is that both, but especially f) (which is increasing in many countries), play a more significant part in malnutrition than is often admitted.

3. Comparisons

1. The two basic comparative forms are:

The Pacific Ocean is larger than the Atlantic.

His work is more interesting than hers.

a) -er is added to one-syllable adjectives (slow/slower) and two-syllable adjectives ending in -y (easy/easier).

b) more is used with words of two or more syllables:

careful/more careful quickly/more quickly.

However, there are some two-syllable words that can use either form:
simple/simpler/more simple.

CROSS REFERENCE

2. Comparisons can be made more exact by using slightly, considerably or significantly before the comparative:

Dickens's novels are considerably longer than Austen's.

The new Mercedes is slightly more economical than the old model.

3. Study the table and complete the exercise below.

Cost of sending a letter to a domestic destination (eurocent)

Germany	110
France	85
Japan	62
Britain	60
United States	48
Spain	45

- a) Letters in France are in Japan.
- b) Spanish letters are German letters.
- c) American letters are letters in Britain.
- d) Letters in Germany are in America.

4. The form as as can be used to stress similarity:

British letters are nearly as expensive as Japanese letters.

It can also be used for quantitative comparison:

German letters are twice as expensive as American letters

Also: half as/three times as/etc.

5. Note the variety of forms possible:

German letters are more expensive than French (ones/letters). (least formal)

Letters in Germany are more expensive than (those) in France.

The cost of sending a letter is higher in Germany than in France. (most formal)

NB. high and low are used for comparing abstract concepts such as rates.

Ones can replace the noun when used with an adjective:

German letters are more expensive than Japanese ones.

But not in combination with a noun:

Family cars are cheaper than sports cars. (not sports ones)

6. More/less, the most/the least (followed by adjective), the most/the fewest (related to number)

Divorce is less common in Greece than in Britain.

The most crowded country in Europe is Holland.

The School of Education offers the most modules. (more than others)

7. Complete the following description of the table in (3) above (one word per gap):

According to the table, Spain is the a) expensive country for sending a domestic letter. The USA is b) more expensive, while the cost in Britain is c) the same d) in Japan. France and Germany are the e) expensive countries; France being 20% cheaper f) Germany. Overall, posting a letter costs g) as much in Spain h) in Germany.

8. Study the table and complete the text below (one word per gap).

American spending on leisure activities, 1997, US$ billion casino gambling	24

lotteries	18
recorded music	15
theme parks	9
video games	8.5
spectator sports	6
cinema tickets	5.5
racecourse betting	2.5

The table shows that Americans spend the a) money ($80 bn.) on video, audio and computer equipment. They spend 40% b) on books and newspapers, while casinos, in third place, are c) popular d) lotteries or recorded music. Americans spend e) more on theme parks than f) video games, and the cinema, in ninth place, is nearly g) popular as spectator sports. The h) amount of money is spent on racecourse betting.

4. Definitions

cross reference
1.13 Introductions

1. In academic writing, definitions are normally needed in two situations:

- a) In introductions, to clarify a word or phrase in the title.
- b) More generally, to explain a word or phrase that may be either very technical (and so not in normal dictionaries), or very recent, or with no widely agreed meaning.

Word	Category	Detail	Use
A lecture	is a formal talk	given to a large group,	often used for teaching
An assignment	is a task	often given to students	for teaching or assessment

2. Insert suitable category words in the following definitions.

- a) A barometer is a scientific designed to measure atmospheric pressure.
- b) Kidneys are that separate waste fluid from the blood.
- c) A multi-national company is a business that operates in many countries.
- d) Reinforced concrete is a building consisting of cement, sand and steel rods.
- e) Bullying is a pattern of anti-social found in many schools.
- f) Recycling is a in which materials are used again.
- g) A recession is a of reduced economic activity.
- h) Postcodes are a for making mail delivery more efficient.

3. More complete definitions may be written by adding examples or extra information:

A mortgage is a type of loan (that is) used for buying property, in which the lender has the security of the property.

Complete and extend the following definitions.

- a) Distillation is a used to
- b) A psychiatrist is a who specialises in
- c) An MSc. is a awarded on completion of
- d) A trades union is a(n)..... that exists to protect
- e) Malaria is a caused by
- f) Wheat is a used for

4. Study the following examples and underline the term being defined.

- a) ... the definition for a failed project ... ranges from abandoned projects to projects that simply do not meet their full potential or simply have schedule overrun problems.
- b) Development is a socio-economic–technological process having the main objective of raising the standards of living of the people.

- c) Electronic commerce is characterised by an absence of physical proximity between the buyer and seller in conducting the search, assessment and transaction stages of a transaction.
- d) Bowlby (1982) suggested that attachment is an organised system whose goal is to make individuals feel safe and secure.
- e) ... the non-linear effect called 'self-brightening' in which large-amplitude waves decay more slowly than small-amplitude ones.

The examples above illustrate the variety of methods employed in definitions:

- (a) gives various examples that fall into the grouping the author wishes to examine.
- (b), (d) and (e) use category words: process, system, effect.
- (c) defines the term in a negative way (an absence).
- (d) quotes a definition from another writer.

5. When writing introductions, it is often helpful to define a term in the title, even when it may be in common use, to demonstrate that you have thought about it and that you have a clear idea what it means in your essay.

Title: Higher education should be free and open to all – Discuss.

Higher education in Britain means university-level study for first or higher degrees, normally at the age of 18 or above.

Study the following titles, decide which term needs defining in each, and write a definition for two of them.

- a) Compare the murder rate for countries with capital punishment with that for those without it.
- b) The department store is a nineteenth-century creation which has no future in the twenty-first century – Discuss.
- c) The incidence of post-natal depression appears to be rising. What are the most effective methods of treating the condition?

6. Select several terms from your own subject area and write extensive definitions for them.

5. Discussion

4.5 Discursive Essay

1. Many essay titles require the writer to examine both sides of a case and to conclude by coming down in favour of one side.

These may be called discussion, for and against or argument essays. For example:

- a) School uniforms – a step forward or a step back? – Discuss.
- b) Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of state control of industry.

Discussion vocabulary

benefit	drawback
advantage	disadvantage
a positive aspect	a negative feature

2. There are two basic outlines for a discussion essay:

- i) School uniforms?
 - a) advantages: reduce social inequality/encourage group identity/avoid choice
 - b) disadvantages: loss of individuality/expense/unfashionable
 - c) discussion: overall, benefits more valuable in most cases
- ii) School uniforms?
 - a) social: emphasises group values – diminishes individual choice
 - b) practical: expensive for poor families but easier to get dressed
 - c) discussion: overall, benefits more valuable in most cases

3. Choose one of the titles below and write down as many pros and cons in the box as possible. Then prepare a plan using one of the outlines above.

- a) Instead of going out to work, mothers should stay at home and look after their children until they are at least five – Discuss.
- b) Fast food, which is spreading round the world and destroying national cultures, should be resisted. To what extent do you agree?

4. Presenting your case.

It is better to use impersonal phrases rather than I think:

It is widely believed that young children need to be with their mothers ...

Most people consider that fast food is very convenient ...

It is generally agreed that school uniforms develop a group identity ...

It is probable/possible that fast food will become more acceptable ...

This evidence suggests that most children benefit from nurseries ...

However, if you want to defend a minority point of view, you can use the following:

It can be argued that children benefit from a diet of hamburgers.

It has been suggested that school uniforms make children more rebellious.

Some people believe that nursery education damages children.

It is important to show that you are aware of counter-arguments, which can be presented first.

Study the example and write similar sentences about working mothers and fast food using ideas from (3).

Counter-argument	Your position
Although it has been suggested that school uniforms make children more rebellious,	it is generally agreed that uniforms develop a group identity.

5. Before giving your own opinion, it is necessary to show that you have read the relevant sources and have studied the evidence.

Opinions without evidence have little value. The following paragraph discusses the environmental effects of deforestation.

Lomborg (2001) claims that the danger of extinction of species has been exaggerated. He says that the number of species had been expected to decline dramatically within the next half century, but maintains that this is unlikely: 'Species ... seem more resilient than expected.' He points out that in the eastern USA, although 98% of the original forests have been cleared, only one forest bird became extinct in the process. Against this, Brooks (2001) feels that Lomborg is ignoring the true rate of forest loss and the related extinction of species: 'The ongoing wave of extinctions, due primarily to deforestation in the moist tropics, has been widely documented.' It seems that Lomborg, as a statistician, is too dependent on optimistic data, and is ignoring the widespread concerns of wildlife experts.

The paragraph has the following structure:

Lomborg – paraphrase + quotation

Brooks – paraphrase + quotation

Writer's comment on Lomborg + opinion

6. Complete the following paragraph, which discusses air pollution, to give an opinion.

According to Lomborg (2001), air quality is improving in rich countries. He gives the example of London, where he claims that the air is cleaner now than it has been since 1585, thanks to decreases in smoke and sulphur dioxide. Brooks (2001), however, argues that Lomborg is 'ignoring the more recent global rise in toxic contaminants, now found at high concentrations ... even in the remote reaches of the Arctic.' 6. Examples

1. When writing essays it is often better to support statements by giving examples.

Compare the following:

- a) Many plants and animals are threatened by global warming.
- b) Many plants and animals are threatened by global warming. In southern Britain, for example, the beech tree may become extinct within 30 years.

The second sentence provides concrete details of a plant species, an area and a time scale to support the main statement.

3.5 Conjunctions

2. Phrases for introducing examples include:

Many departments, for instance/for example engineering, now offer foundation courses.
(note use of commas)

A few courses such as/e.g. MBA require work experience.

Many universities, particularly/especially UK ones, ask overseas students for IELTS scores.
(note the focus)

Some subjects are heavily oversubscribed. A case in point is medicine. (for single examples)

Use suitable example phrases to complete the following sentences.

- a) As the climate warms, wetland species frogs may find their habitat reduced.
- b) Some animals can migrate to cooler areas. are birds, which can move easily.
- c) Many plants, trees, will find it difficult to move to wetter regions in the north.
- d) Certain reptiles, snakes, may benefit from drier and warmer summers.
- e) Rising sea levels may bring some advantages expanding wetland areas.

3. Find a suitable example for each sentence.

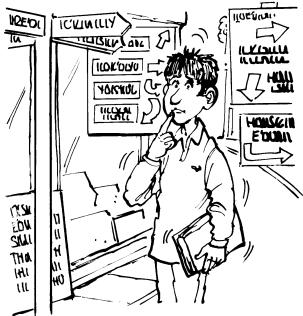

Example:

Various sectors in the economy are experiencing labour shortages.

Various sectors in the economy, for instance engineering, are experiencing labour shortages.

- a) A number of sports have become very profitable due to the sale of television rights.
- b) Some British universities offer special courses in English for overseas students.
- c) In recent years many women have made significant contributions to the political world.
- d) Three-year guarantees are now being offered by most car makers.
- e) Certain diseases are proving much harder to combat than was expected 20 years ago.

- f) Many musical instruments use strings to make music.
 g) Several mammals are currently in danger of extinction.

4. Provide examples in the following paragraph where they appear necessary.

Students who go to study abroad often experience a type of culture shock when they arrive in the new country. Customs which they took for granted in their own society are not followed in the host country. Even everyday patterns of life may be different. When these are added to the inevitable differences which occur in every country students may at first feel confused. They may experience rapid changes of mood, or even want to return home. However, most soon make new friends and, in a relatively short period, are able to adjust to their new environment. They may even find that they prefer some aspects of their new surroundings, and forget that they are not at home for a while!

5. Another small group of phrases is used when there is only one example. This is a kind of restatement:

The world's biggest software company, i.e. Microsoft, is buying a share of the cable business.

in other words/namely/that is to say/i.e./viz. (in very formal English only)

In the following sentences, add a suitable phrase from the box below.

- a) His mother's sister was a small but very remarkable woman.
 b) When the liquid reached boiling point the reaction began.
 c) All the plants and animals at risk in the region must be protected.
 d) At this stage, all the students should be rigorously evaluated.
 e) It was cold, wet and windy.

namely 140 degrees in other words, an English summer's day viz., given an examination that is to say, the endangered wildlife namely, the Atlantic Ocean

7. Generalisations

1. Decide if you agree with the following:

- a) When two Englishmen meet, their first talk is of the weather. (Samuel Johnson)
- b) A bank is a place that will lend you money if you can prove that you don't need it. (Bob Hope)

The above are well-known quotations, which are remembered because they are funny, though only partly true. This shows that generalisations are easy to remember, if not always accurate.

2. In written work generalisations are very useful because they can be used to present complex ideas or data in a simple form:

Large companies can offer better career opportunities.

Language is an important means of communication.

Study the table below and compare the statements.

UK smokers by gender

Men	Women
43.8%	56.2%

- a) 56.2 % of British smokers are women.
- b) The majority of British smokers are women.

The first sentence is more accurate, but the second, which contains a generalisation, is easier to understand. However, using generalisations does involve a loss of precision, so the writer must judge when they can be used safely, and when it is better to give the full data.

cross reference

3.4 Caution

3. There are two ways of making a generalisation:

- a) Using the plural: Computers are useful machines.
- b) Using definite article and the singular: The computer is a useful machine. (less common/more formal)

It is better to avoid absolute phrases such as cats are cleverer than dogs. Instead use more cautious phrases such as cats tend to be cleverer than dogs or most cats are more intelligent than dogs.

Write generalisations on the following topics.

- a) child/noise Example: Children are often noisy.
- b) flowers/presents.....
- c) city/pollution.....
- d) fresh fruit/health.....
- e) television/important

4. Read the following text and underline the generalisations.

Li Pang is a Chinese student studying architecture in Manchester. He enjoys the style of teaching as well as the cosmopolitan lifestyle the city provides. Many international students attend British universities. Most welcome the chance to meet classmates from all over the world, and all are pleased to have the chance to improve their English. When he goes home to Shanghai, Li Pang will have a network of international contacts to support his future career.

average income	£5,000	£11,700	£19,000
average house price	£19,800	£61,500	£68,300

When making generalisations it is easy to over-generalise, using inadequate data.

The following statements were written using the data in the table above, but each contains an error. Find the error and re-write the sentence.

Example:

People were much richer in 1999 than 20 years earlier.

This ignores inflation over the period. It is more accurate to say:

Average incomes in 1999 were nearly four times higher than in 1979.

- a) Between 1979 and 1999, the worst period for unemployment was 1989.
- b) Inflation fell steadily for 20 years after 1979.
- c) There was a dramatic rise in house prices in these two decades.
- d) Interest rates peaked in 1989.

7. Read this text about dreams and write five generalisations using the data.

A recent survey on dreams, completed by over 10,000 people, found that 68% of all dreams came into the 'anxiety' category. Being chased was the most common dream, recorded by 72%. Dreams about falling (which signify insecurity) are also very common, being recorded by 70%.

55% have dreamed about relatives and friends who have died. Many people believe that dreams can foretell the future, but only 42% have experienced this type. 28% of those surveyed have dreams about food, which seem to occur during periods of weight watching, but 23% have been pleased by dreams of finding money.

Example:

Anxiety seems to be the cause of most dreams.

8. Numbers

1. Discussing statistical data is a necessary part of much academic writing:

Approximately 1800 children between the ages of 5 and 12 years were randomly selected.

Already 3% of the US working population (1.55 million) are employed in 70,000 centres ...

The earth's atmosphere appears to be gaining 3.3 billion metric tons of carbon annually ...
... but 5 winters in the 20th century were more than 2.4°C colder than average.

Figures and numbers are both used to talk about statistical data in a general sense.

The figures in the report need to be read critically.

Digits are individual numbers. Both fractions ($\frac{1}{2}$) and decimals (0.975) may be used.

4,539 – a four digit number

£225,000 – a six figure salary (a number)

no final -s on hundred/thousand/million:

Six million people live in the region.

but: Thousands died in the last outbreak of cholera.

2. When presenting data, the writer must attempt to be accurate without confusing the reader with too much detail.

In some cases, where the actual number is unimportant, words or phrases may replace numbers to simplify the text:

43 villages were cut off by the heavy snowstorm.

Dozens of villages were cut off by the heavy snowstorm.

The following words or phrases can be used to describe quantity.

Few students attended her lecture. (less than expected)

Several bodies have been discovered under the temple floor. (3–4)

Various attempts were made to reach the sunken ship. (3–6)

Dozens of politicians attended the opening ceremony. (30–60)

Scores of books are published every week. (50–100).

Re-write the following sentences using one of the words or phrases above.

- a) Only four people responded to the questionnaire.
- b) They received nearly 100 applications for the post.
- c) She made five or six proposals to improve the team's performance.
- d) He found over 50 factual errors in the article.
- e) They made three or four drafts before writing the final report.

CROSS REFERENCE2.12 Visual Information*3. Percentages are commonly used for expressing rates of change:*Overseas students in the university 1997–2000

Between 1997 and 1998, the number of overseas students increased by 50%.

The number increased by 100% the following year.

There was a 400% increase between 1997 and 2000.

4. Study the following expressions, which are also used to simplify statistics.

one in three

a third/a quarter twice/three times as many

the majority/the minority a tenfold increase fifty per cent, a percentage to double/to halve on average/the average number the most/the least

a small/large proportion

Rewrite each sentence in a simpler way, using one of the expressions above.

- a) Of the 415 people interviewed, 308 said that they supported the president.
- b) Last year the number of students on the course was 28, the year before it was 20 and this year it is 24.
- c) In 1965 a litre of petrol cost 10p, while the price is now 80p.
- d) Out of 18 students in the group, 12 were women.
- e) The new type of train reduced the journey time to Madrid from seven hours to three hours 20 minutes.
- f) 15 of the students studied law, eight finance and three engineering.
- g) The numbers applying to this department have risen from 350 last year to 525 this year.

5. Re-write the following sentences to present the data in a simpler way.

- a) The population of the European part of the former Soviet Union is declining rapidly. It is forecast to fall by 18 m to 220 m in 2025, and to drop to 140 m by 2100.

Example:

The population of the European part of the former Soviet Union is forecast to fall by nearly 10% by 2025, and by nearly 40% by the end of the century.

- b) The numbers of visitors to the temples show a remarkable pattern. In 1998 just 40,000 made the journey, 83,000 in 1999 and 171,000 in 2000.
- c) More than 80% of British students complete their first degree course; in Italy the figure is 35%.
- d) Tap water costs 0.07p per litre while bottled water, on average, costs 50p per litre.
- e) Only 8% of the women surveyed believed that they had the same rights as men. A considerable 37% complained that they had far fewer rights.
- f) Life expectancy for men in the UK rose from 49 to 74 during the twentieth century.
- g) The same operation cost £1,850 at a hospital in Blackburn, £2,400 in Birmingham and £2,535 in London.
- h) In 1086 about 15% of England was forested, compared with only 4.8% in 1870.

9. References and Quotations

1. A reference is an acknowledgement that you are making use of another writer's ideas or data in your writing:

As Donner (1997) pointed out, low inflation does not always lead to low interest rates.

There are three main reasons for giving references:

- To avoid the charge of plagiarism, which is using another person's ideas or research without acknowledgement.
- The reference can give more authority to your writing, for it shows you are familiar with other research on the topic.
- The reader can find the original source by using the reference section, which would list the full publishing details of Donner's book:

Donner, F. (1997) Macroeconomics. Borchester: Borchester University Press

2. Decide which of the following need references.

- A mention of facts or figures from another writer
- An idea of your own
- Some data you have found from your own research
- A theory suggested by another researcher
- A quotation from a work by any author
- Something that is agreed to be common knowledge

3. In order to give references accurately it is important to follow the following procedure:

- When reading and note-making, keep a careful record of the details of your sources. For a long piece of writing such as a dissertation a card index is useful.
- Find out which system of referencing is used in your subject area. You can do this by studying current textbooks and journals and checking departmental guidelines.
- Follow one of the methods illustrated below to give the reference.

4. a) Summary of a writer's ideas.

Orwell (1940) pointed out that although Charles Dickens described eating large meals in many of his books, he never wrote about farming. He explains this contradiction in terms of Dickens' upbringing in London, remote from the countryside.

b) Quotation of a writer's words.

Orwell clearly highlighted this inconsistency in Dickens: 'It is not merely a coincidence that Dickens never writes about agriculture and writes endlessly about food. He was a Cockney, and London is the centre of the earth in rather the same sense that the belly is the centre of the body.' (Orwell, 1940: pp. 53-54)

c) Mixture of summary and quotation.

As Orwell (1940) noted, Dickens frequently described food but was uninterested in food production. He considered that this was because of the writer's background: 'He was a Cockney, and London is the centre of the earth.'(pp.53-54)

1.6 Note-Making

5. Read the following extract from the same essay ('Charles Dickens' in Inside the Whale, Orwell, G., 1940: pp.54–55)

What he does not noticeably write about, however, is work. In Dickens' novels anything in the nature of work happens off-stage. The only one of his heroes who has a plausible profession is David Copperfield, who is first a shorthand writer and then a novelist, like Dickens himself. With most of the others, the way they earn their living is very much in the background.

- Write a summary of the author's ideas, including a suitable reference.*
- Introduce a quotation of the key part of the extract, again referring to the source.*

Combine (a) and (b), again acknowledging the source.

3.16 Referring Verbs

6. Referring verbs use both the present and the past tenses.

It is probably best to use the present tense for recent sources or when you feel that the ideas or data are still valid:

Rathbone (1997) demonstrates the limitations of video-conferencing.

The past tense suggests that the source is older and the ideas perhaps out-of-date:

Steinbeck (1965) explored a link between cancer and diet.

7. There are three main systems of reference in use in academic writing:

- The system illustrated above (the Harvard) is the most common. Note the following:

Hunter (1989) states ... (date of publication in brackets when referring verb is used)

Women pose less security risk. (Burke and Pollock, 1993) (authors and date in brackets after summary)

NB. For quotations page numbers should also be given after the date.

Details of the organisation of the reference section are given in (8) below.

- Numbers in brackets are inserted in the text for each source, and at the end of the chapter or article the references are listed in number order:

A survey of Fortune 500 companies found that over 70% have problems recruiting skilled staff (1). Some analysts argue that this could be as high as 90% (2).

1. Cuervo, D. 1990, Whither Recruitment? HR Journal 13. pp. 23–39.

2. Segall, N. 1996, Cross-cultural studies, Harper & Row, New York pp. 173-4.

- A third system uses footnotes:

More than 80% of families own or are buying their own homes.²

In this system the references are listed at the bottom of the page:

2. The Economist, 13 January 1996, pp. 27–8.

NB. A full reference section is required at the end of the article or book.

8. Organising the bibliography/references

Here is the reference section of an essay written by a business student.

Study the pattern of organisation and answer the following questions.

- a) How are the entries ordered?
- b) What is the difference between the information provided for:
 - i) a book by one author
 - ii) an edited book
 - iii) a source on the internet
 - iv) an article in a journal
- c) When are italics used?
- d) How are capital letters used in titles?
- e) How is a source with no given author listed?

10. Style

1. Study the style of this paragraph and underline any examples of poor style.

A lot of people think that the weather is getting worse. They say that this has been going on for quite a long time. I think that they are quite right. Research has shown that we now get storms etc all the time.

2. Academic writing attempts to be precise, semi-formal, impersonal and objective.

This does not mean that pronouns like I and we are never used, but in general the focus is on presenting information as clearly and accurately as possible. In this way such writing differs from normal speech and writing, which is more personal and uses more lively idioms and phrases. Using these guidelines, the paragraph above can be analysed:

A lot of people think...	Imprecise – how many is a lot ?
...the weather ...	Imprecise – weather is short-term
...getting worse ...	Informal
They say...	Use of pronoun informal
...going on ...	Informal phrasal verb
... quite a long time.	Imprecise – how long is this?
I think...	Informal, personal phrase
Research...	Vague – whose research?
...we now get ...	Informal
...storms etc ...	Vague
...all the time.	Over-generalised

The paragraph can be rewritten:

It is widely believed that the climate is deteriorating. It is claimed that this process has been continuing for nearly 100 years. This belief appears to be supported by McKinley (1997), who shows a 55% increase in the frequency of severe winter gales since 1905.

3. It is difficult to give rules for academic style which apply to all subject areas.

When reading books and journals in your area you should note what is acceptable. You will probably meet exceptions to the points below as you read, but if you follow these guidelines you should be able to develop a suitable style of your own.

- a) Do not use idiomatic or colloquial vocabulary: dad, guy. Use standard English: father, man.
- b) Use vocabulary accurately. There is a difference between rule and law, or currency and money, which you are expected to know.
- c) Be as precise as possible when dealing with facts or figures. Avoid phrases such as about a hundred or hundreds of years ago. If it is necessary to estimate numbers use approximately rather than about.

3.4 Caution

cross reference

3.2 Adverbs

cross reference

3.11 Passives

- d) Conclusions should use tentative language. Avoid absolute statements such as education reduces crime. Instead use cautious phrases: may reduce crime or tends to reduce crime.
- e) Avoid adverbs that show your personal attitude: luckily, remarkably, surprisingly.
- f) Do not contract verb forms: don't, can't. Use the full form: do not, cannot.
- g) Although academic English tends to use the passive more than standard English, it should not be over-used. Both have their place. Compare:
- Manners (1995) claims that most companies perform worse when ...
It is widely agreed that most companies perform worse when ...
In the first case, the focus is on the source, in the second on what companies do.
- h) Avoid the following:
- like* for introducing examples. Use such as or for instance.
thing and combinations: nothing or something. Use factor, issue or topic.
lots of. Use a significant/considerable number.
little/big. Use small/large.
get phrases such as get better/worse. Use improve and deteriorate.
- i) Do not use question forms such as What were the reasons for the decline in wool exports? Instead use statements: There were four main reasons for the decline...
- j) Avoid numbering sections of your text, except in certain reports. Use conjunctions and signposting expressions to introduce new sections (Turning to the question of taxation ...). Sub-headings are widely used.
- k) When writing lists, avoid using etc. or and so on. Insert and before the last item:
The forests of the twelfth century consisted of oak, ash and lime.
- l) Avoid using two-word verbs such as go on or bring up if there is a suitable synonym. Use continue or raise.

4. In the following, first underline the examples of poor style and then re-write them in a more suitable way:

- a) Lots of people think that the railways are getting worse.
- b) Sadly, serious crime like murder is going up.
- c) You can't always trust the numbers in that report.
- d) The second thing is that most kids in that district will become criminals.

- e) I think that there's a big risk of more strikes, disorder etc.
- f) A few years ago they allowed women to vote.
- g) Regrettably, the inflation in Russia led to increased poverty, illness and so on.
- h) Sometime soon they will find a vaccine for malaria.
- i) What were the main causes of the American Revolution?

5. Re-write the following paragraphs in better style.

- a) These days a lot of kids are starting school early. Years ago, they began at five, but now it's normal to start at four or younger. Why is this? One thing is that mums need to get back to work. Is it good for the kids? Jenkins has studied this and says that early schooling causes social problems like stealing, drug-taking etc. I think he's right and we should pay mums to stay at home.

- b) Why are there so many jams on the roads these days? One thing is that public transport like trains, buses etc is so dear. A long time ago cars cost a lot but now, unfortunately, they've got a lot cheaper. Another thing is that driving is a lot nicer than waiting for a bus. The trouble is that if everyone buys a car the roads get packed.

11. Synonyms

1.7 Paraphrasing

- 1. When writing it is necessary to find synonyms in order to provide variety and interest for the reader:

General Motors is the largest motor company in the world, with total revenues amounting to 15% of the global automotive market. The giant firm employs 360,000 people internationally.

largest company	giant firm
motor	automotive
in the world	global/internationally

Synonyms are not always exactly the same in meaning, but it is important not to change the register. Firm is a good synonym for company, but boss is too informal to use for manager.

- 2. a) The accuracy of a synonym is often dependent on context. Both pupil and student could be used to identify a 15-year-old schoolgirl, but when she goes to university only student is normally used. Scholar might be a possible synonym, but it is very formal. Similarly, at university a lecturer could also be called a teacher, but in school the only possible synonym for teacher is the old-fashioned master or mistress.
 b) Many basic words, e.g. culture, economy, society or science, have no effective synonyms.

3.14 Prepositions after Verbs

Nouns		Verbs
goal	target	reduce	decrease
study	research	achieve	reach results	findings	alter	change area	field	evaluate	examine authority	source	claim	suggest benefit	advantage	assist	help
category	type	attach	join component	part	challenge	question
concept	idea	clarify	explain
behaviour	conduct	collapse	fall down controversy	argument	concentrate	focus feeling	emotion	confine	limit beliefs	ethics	show	demonstrate interpretation	explanation	found	establish issue	topic	develop	evolve

method	system	maintain	insist option	possibility	predict	forecast statistics	figures	prohibit	ban framework	structure	retain	keep trend	tendency	strengthen	reinforce accelerate	speed up

4. Find synonyms for the words and phrases in italic.

- a) Professor Hicks questioned the findings of the research.
- b) The statistics show a steady expansion in applications.
- c) The institute's prediction has caused a major controversy.
- d) Cost seems to be the leading drawback to that system.
- e) They will concentrate on the first option.
- f) After the lecture she tried to clarify her concept.
- g) Three issues need to be examined.
- h) The framework can be retained but the goal needs to be altered.
- i) OPEC, the oil producers' cartel, is to cut production to raise global prices.
- j) The trend to smaller families has speeded up in the last decade.

5. In the following text, replace all the words or phrases in italic with suitable synonyms.

A leading French company has started a new programme to reduce costs. The company's programme aims to reduce costs by $100 million. All the staff have taken pay cuts, and senior staff will have their pay cut by 20%. The company aims to increase profits by 35% next year, and promises that pay will be increased if that happens.

6. Identify the synonyms in this text by underlining them and linking them to the word they are substituting for.

Example: agency – organisation

The chairman of the UK's food standards agency has said that a national advertising campaign is necessary to raise low levels of personal hygiene. The organisation is planning a £3m publicity programme to improve British eating habits. A survey has shown that half the population do not wash before eating, and one in five fail to wash before preparing food. There are over 6 million cases of food poisoning in this country every year, and the advertising blitz aims to cut this by 20%. This reduction, the food body believes, could be achieved by regular hand washing prior to meals.

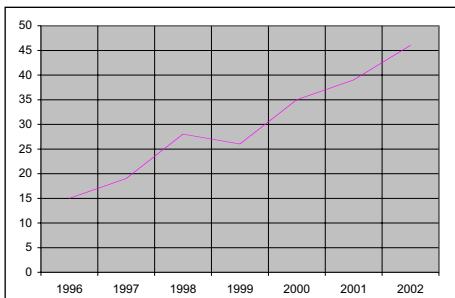

12. Visual Information

1. Visual devices such as graphs and tables are convenient ways of displaying large quantities of information in a form that is quick and simple to understand.

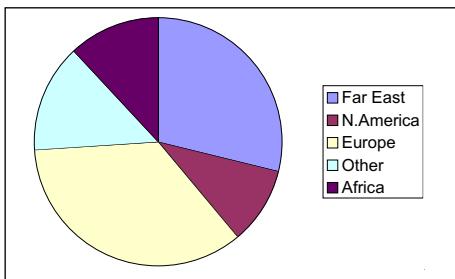

Below are illustrations of some of the main types of visuals used in academic texts. Match the uses (a–f) to the types (1–6) and the examples (A–F) in the box below.

- | | | | |
|------|-------------|--------------------|------------------------|
| Uses | a) location | b) comparison | c) proportion |
| | d) function | e) changes in time | f) statistical display |

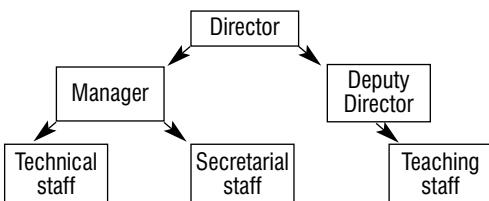

Types	Uses	Example
1. diagram
2. table
3. map
4. pie chart
5. bar chart
6. line graph

A. % of students with part-time jobs

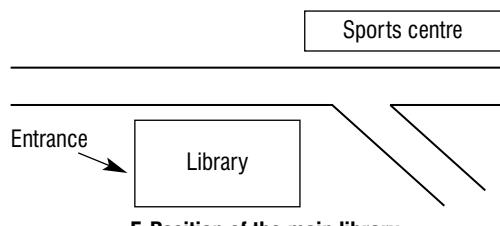

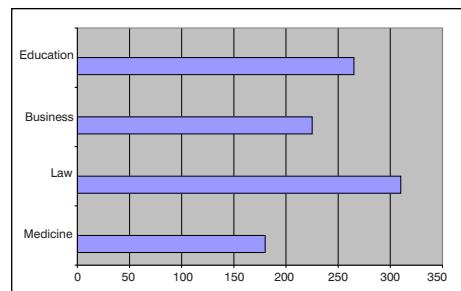

C. Origins of international students

B. Part-time student enrolments

2. The language of change

Verb →	Adverb	Verb →	Adjective + noun grew	slightly	dropped	a slight drop rose	gradually	fell	a gradual fall increased	steadily	decreased	a sharp decrease
climbed	sharply

Study the graph below and complete the description with phrases from the table above.

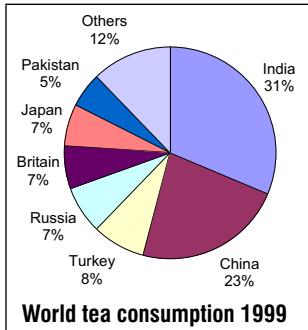

Sports centre membership a) in 1992, and then b) until 1995, reaching a peak of 4900. It c) in 1996, but d) the next year. In 1998 there was a e) , then a peak of 6,700 in 1999, followed by a f) in 2000.

3. Although visuals do largely speak for themselves, it is usual to help the reader interpret them by briefly commenting on their main features.

The graph	shows	the changes in the price of oil since 1990
The map	illustrates	the main squatter housing areas in Ankara
The diagram	displays	the experimental set-up of the laboratory study

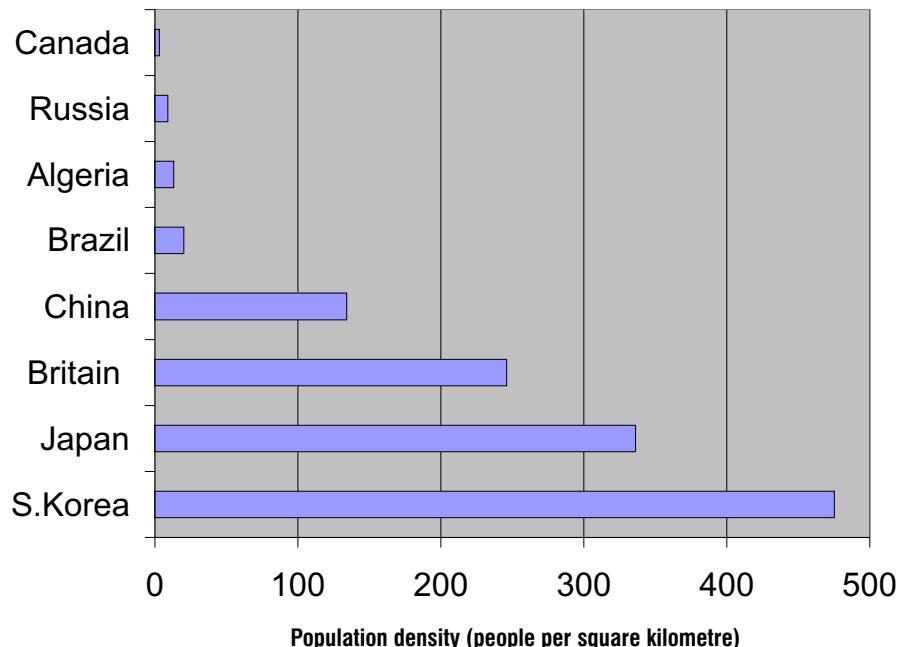

Read the following descriptions of the chart opposite. Which is better?

- The chart shows the quantity of tea consumed by the world's leading tea-consuming nations. India and China together consume more than half the world's tea production, with India alone consuming about one-third. Other significant tea consumers are Turkey, Russia and Britain. 'Others' includes the United States, Iran and Egypt.
- The chart shows that 31% of the world's tea is consumed by India, 23% by China, and 8% by Turkey. The fourth largest consumers are Russia, Japan and Britain, with 7% each, while Pakistan consumes 5%. Other countries account for the remaining 12%.

4. Complete the following description of the chart below.

The chart shows population a) in a variety of countries around the world. It b) the extreme contrast c) crowded nations such as South Korea (475 people per sq. km.) and much d) countries such as Canada (3 people per sq. km.). Clearly, climate plays a major e) in determining population density, f) the least crowded nations g) to have extreme climates (e.g. cold in Russia or dry in Algeria).

5. Complete the following description of the table below.

Marriage and divorce rates (per 1,000 population)

Country	Marriage rate	Divorce rate
Britain	10.7	3.4
United States	8.6	4.7
Turkey	8.0	0.5
Iran	7.8	0.5
Japan	6.2	1.8
Russia	5.2	3.2
Spain	5.2	0.8
South Africa	4.0	0.9

The a) shows the wide variations in marriage and divorce rates in a b) of countries. The c) rate varies from 10.7 per thousand in d) to 4.0 in South Africa, while the divorce e) ranges from 4.7 in the United States to 0.5 in Turkey and f) It appears that in the United States more than g) of all marriages end in divorce, while in Turkey the h) is less than 10%. This suggests that in countries such as the United States and Britain the high marriage rate may be a i) of the high divorce rate.

6. When referring to visual information in the text, the word figure is used for everything (such as maps, charts and graphs) except tables.

Figures and tables should be numbered and given a title. Titles of tables are written above, whereas titles of figures are written below the data. As with other data, sources must be given for all visual information.

3. Accuracy in Writing

Student Introduction

Accuracy is only one aspect of the total fabric of good writing. Few teachers will be concerned by one minor mistake with a preposition or a plural in a sentence. But if a student is making mistakes in every other word there is likely to be serious loss of meaning, and their teacher may be unable to mark the work fairly. Many of the most common errors are highlighted in Part 1 Unit 16 (Proof-Reading).

Non-native speakers of English tend to have problems of accuracy which relate to their mother tongue. Japanese speakers, for example, find it difficult to use articles because these are not found in Japanese. It is clearly unrealistic for such students to aim at 100% accuracy in their written work, but equally it is important to aim to improve accuracy in order to compete with native-speaker classmates.

The components of Accuracy in Writing have been chosen on the basis that they regularly cause difficulties and confusion in students' writing. These units are not intended to replace a standard grammar reference book; instead they assume a good basic knowledge of English grammar and focus on those areas of concern to the writer, rather than the speaker, of English.

As in Part 2, the units are arranged alphabetically. Students may already be aware of their weaknesses and want to focus on the relevant units, or they may seek specific assistance after getting feedback on an essay. There are also two tests of accuracy in the Writing Tests which students can use to pinpoint their weak areas.

1. Abbreviations

1. Abbreviations are an important and expanding feature of contemporary English.

They are used for convenience, and familiarity with abbreviations makes both academic reading and writing easier. Three main types can be found:

- a) shortened words – photo (photograph)
- b) acronyms – UNESCO
- c) others – NB

2. Shortened words are often used without the writer being aware of the original form.

Bus comes from omnibus, which is never used in modern English, but refrigerator is still better in written English than the informal fridge. Public house is now very formal (pub is acceptable), but television should be used instead of the idiomatic telly.

3. Acronyms are made up of the initial letters of a name or phrase.

For example, AIDS = acquired immune deficiency syndrome. They are read as words. The more official acronyms are written in capitals (NATO), but others use lower case (yuppie). NATO stands for North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, which is a real body, whereas yuppie means young upwardly mobile professional, which is a concept.

4. Other abbreviations are read as sets of individual letters.

They include names of countries, organisations and companies (USA / BBC / IBM), and also abbreviations that are found only in written English (PTO = please turn over / Rd = road).

5. All academic subjects employ abbreviations to save time.

Examples from business/economics include:

GDP = gross domestic product

PR = public relations

PLC = public limited company

CEO = chief executive officer

IMF = International Monetary Fund

WTO = World Trade Organisation

6. There are many standard abbreviations found in some types of writing which have a full stop after them to indicate a shortened form.

For example, St. = Saint. Other examples are govt. (government), co. (company) and Oct. (October). With type (b) and (c) abbreviations there is no standard pattern for using full stops, so both BBC and B.B.C. are used. There is, however, a trend to use full stops less. The important thing is to employ a consistent style in your work.

7. Abbreviations can be confusing.

PC, for example, can mean Police Constable (in Britain), personal computer and also politically correct. CD may stand for compact disc or corps diplomatique. PM could be Prime Minister or post meridiem. It is useful to be aware of these potential confusions.

8. Certain abbreviations are found in all types of academic writing.

They include:

cf. = compare

e.g. = for example

et al. = and others (used in giving names of multiple authors)

Fig. = figure (for labelling charts and graphs)

ibid. = in the same place (to refer to source mentioned immediately before) i.e. = that is

K = thousand

op. cit. = in the source mentioned previously p.a. = yearly

pp. = pages

re = with reference to

9. Other abbreviations are very subject specific and may be special to one article.

In that case they need explaining:

... the developing countries with the highest per-capita dietary energy supplies (DES)

... one delegate expressed surprise that Call Centres (CCs) should ...

10. Explain the abbreviations in the following sentences.

- a) The PM told MPs that the NHS needed reform.
- b) The failure rate among IT projects reaches 70% (Smith et al., 1997).
- c) The world's most populous country i.e. China has joined the WTO.
- d) NB. CVs must be no longer than 3 sides of A4.
- e) See the OECD's recent report on the UK.
- f) The EU hopes to achieve a standard rate of VAT.
- g) The CEO intends to raise spending on R&D by 40%.
- h) Fig.4. Trade patterns on the w.w.w. (1997–2001).
- i) The WHO is concerned about the spread of TB.
- j) Director of PR required – salary approx. $45K.
- k) GM technology is leading to advances in many fields, e.g. forestry.
- l) Prof. Wren claimed that the quality of M.Phil. and Ph.D. research was falling.

2. Adverbs

1. Adverbs are used in academic texts in a variety of ways.

Among the most important are:

- a) to provide more detail, with verbs and adjectives:

Reasonably good data are available for only ...

... decomposition eventually ceases in modern landfills ...

- b) individually, often at the beginning of sentences, to introduce new points:

Currently, the Earth's atmosphere appears to be ...

Alternatively, the use of non-conventional renewable energies ...

NB. These can be similar in function to conjunctions.

2. Adverbs linked to verbs and adjectives usually fall into three groups.

- a) Time (when?)

previously published

retrospectively examined

- b) Degree (how much?)

declined considerably

contribute substantially

- c) Manner (in what way?)

medically complicated remotely located

CROSS REFERENCE

2.10 Style

3. Adverbs used individually need to be employed with care.

It is dangerous to over-use them, for they may convey a sense of the author's voice commenting on the topic. As the academic writer aims to be objective, adverbs like fortunately or remarkably may be unsuitable. However, other, less subjective adverbs can be useful for opening paragraphs or linking ideas. The following examples are often followed by a comma.

Time	Relating ideas
recently	clearly increasingly	obviously originally	(not) surprisingly presently	alternatively currently	similarly traditionally	(more) importantly

4. Insert a suitable adverb from the table into the gaps in the sentences.

- a) Most houses do not have electricity., then, there is little chance of improving living standards.

2.12 Visual Information

- b), the internet was mainly used for academic purposes.
- c) Some courses are assessed purely by exams., coursework may be employed.
- d), there has been growing concern about financing the health service.
- e) Many birds use bright colours to attract a mate., flowers advertise their position to fertilising insects.
- f), the development should be acceptable environmentally.

5. The following adverbs are used to describe changes in the rate of something:

Small	Medium	Large
gradually	substantially	quickly
slightly	significantly	sharply
marginally	steadily	dramatically
slowly	considerably	rapidly

Note that certain adverbs are mainly used to describe changes in time:

Production in Russia rose slowly from 1920 to 1929.

Others are commonly used to show changes in amount:

The birth rate increased slightly after the revolution.

Label the adverbs in the table above either A (amount) or T (time).

6. Use a suitable adverb to complete the following sentences.

- a) Last year inflation increased from 2% to 2.3%.
- b) Life expectancy has fallen in the last 20 years, by about 15%.
- c) The price was reduced, so that a £12 book was offered for £6.
- d) Sales rose while he was chairman, averaging 14% per year.
- e) The numbers of people voting has declined, from 80% to 65%.
- f) The crime rate climbed in the early 1990s, by 20–25% a year.
- g) In the last four years unemployment has fallen, from 5% to 3.5%.
- h) In the first two years of the war the suicide rate dropped, by over 30% each year.

3. Articles

cross reference

3.10 Nouns: Countable and Uncountable

1. Unless they are uncountable, all nouns need an article when used in the singular.

The article can be either a/an or the. Compare:

- a) Research is an important activity in universities.
- b) The research begun by Dr Mathews was continued by Professor Brankovic.
- c) A survey was conducted among 200 patients in the clinic.

In (a) research, which is usually uncountable, is being used in a general sense.

In (b) a specific piece of research is identified.

In (c) the survey is not specified and is being mentioned for the first time.

2. The rules for using the (the definite article) are quite complex.

Decide why it is used, or not used, in the following examples.

- a) The most famous fictional detective is Sherlock Holmes.
- b) The USA was founded in the eighteenth century.
- c) The government changed its attitude in the 1980s.
- d) In many companies, the knowledge of most employees is a wasted resource.
- e) The moon orbits the earth every 28 days.
- f) The south is characterised by poverty and emigration.
- g) Charles Dickens, the English novelist, died in 1870.
- h) The River Trent runs through the middle of England.
- i) The World Health Organisation was founded in 1948.

3. In general, the is used with:

- a) superlatives (most famous)
- b) time periods (eighteenth century/1980s)
- c) unique things (government/moon/earth)
- d) specified things (knowledge of most employees)
- e) regions and rivers (south/River Trent)
- f) very well-known people and things (English novelist)
- g) institutions and bodies (World Health Organisation)
- h) positions (middle)

It is not used with:

- i) names of countries, except for the UK, the USA and a few others
- j) abstract nouns (poverty)
- k) companies/bodies named after people/places (Sainsbury's, Sheffield University)

3.8 Nationality Language

4. In the following sentences, decide if the words in italic are specific or not.
Insert the if specific.

- a) engineering was the main industry in the region.
- b) global warming is partly caused by fossil fuels.
- c) Russian revolution was partly a result of First World War.
- d) fraud is costing banking industry millions of pounds a year.
- e) drought may have been a factor in decline of the Maya empire.
- f) forests of Scandinavia produce most of world's paper.

5. Complete the sentences with either the or nothing.

- a) Japanese emperor lives in centre of Tokyo.
- b) Already 3% of US working population are employed in call centres.
- c) purpose of this paper is to evaluate tests of intelligence.
- d) Picasso, Spanish painter, was born in nineteenth century.
- e) best definition is often simplest.

6. Complete the following text by inserting a/an/the (or nothing) in each gap.

THE ORIGINS OF @

Giorio Stabile, a) professor of b) history at La Sapienza university in Rome, has demonstrated that c) @ sign, now used in email addresses, was actually invented 500 years ago. Professor Stabile has shown that d) @, now e) symbol of f) internet, was first used by Italian merchants during g) sixteenth century.

He claims that it originally represented h) unit of volume, based on i) large jars used to carry liquids in j) ancient Mediterranean world. He has found

4. Caution

cross reference

2.10 Style

1. A cautious style is necessary in some areas of academic writing:

Primary products ... usually have low supply and demand elasticities ...

... multiple factors may lead to a psychiatric consultation

... some parameters might depend on the degree of water content in the sand

... women tend to value privacy more than men

... other studies suggest that some permanent modal shift will occur

Areas where caution is particularly important include:

- a) outlining a hypothesis that needs to be tested, (e.g. in an introduction)
- b) discussing the results of a study, which may not be conclusive
- c) commenting on the work of other writers

2. Caution is needed to avoid making statements that are too simplistic:

Poor education leads to crime.

Such statements are rarely completely true. There is usually an exception that needs to be considered. Caution can be shown in several ways:

(modal verb) Poor education can lead to crime.

(adverb) Poor education frequently leads to crime.

(verb/phrase) Poor education tends to lead to crime.

There is a tendency for poor education to lead to crime.

- 4. Another way to express caution is to use quite, rather or fairly before an adjective.

a fairly accurate summary quite a significant correlation

a rather inconvenient location

NB. quite is often used before the article. It is often used positively, whereas rather tends to be used negatively.

When referring to sources, the verb used indicates the degree of caution appropriate. Compare:

Widmerpool (1999) states that junior doctors work longer than ... (positive)

Le Bas (1983) suggests that more training would result in ... (cautious)

Other verbs that imply tentative or cautious findings are:

think/consider/hypothesise/believe/claim/presume

- 5. Rewrite the following text in more cautious language.

A team of American scientists have found a way to reverse the ageing process. They fed diet supplements, found in health food shops, to elderly rats, which were then tested for memory and stamina. The animals displayed more active behaviour after taking the supplements, and their memory improved. In addition, their appearance became more youthful and their appetite increased.

The researchers say that this experiment is a clear indication of how the problems of old age can be overcome. They state that in a few years' time everyone will be able to look forward to a long and active retirement.

e) progress has been made towards finding a standard floor plan.

11. Passives

cross reference

2.10 Style

1. The passive is used when the writer wants to focus on the result, not on the cause:

The book was written in 1926. (passive)

My father wrote the book. (active)

In the first sentence, the emphasis is on the date, in the second on the writer. So the passive is used in written English when the cause (a person or thing) is less important or unknown.

The treaty will be signed next year. (by someone)

The tower was destroyed a century ago. (by something)

It is quite common to show the cause of the action by adding by ...

The army was helped by good weather in the autumn of 1296.

2. The passive is also used in written work to avoid using I or we:

The findings were evaluated.

An analysis will be made.

Change the following into the passive.

- a) We collected the data and compared the two groups.
- b) I interviewed 120 people in three social classes.
- c) They checked the results and found several errors.

3.2 Adverbs

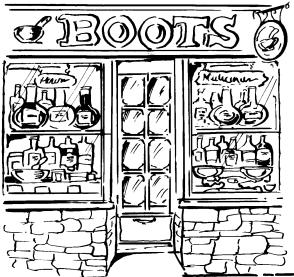

3. An adverb is often inserted in a passive form:

This process is commonly called 'networking'.

Change the following sentences from active to passive and insert a suitable adverb from the box below.

- a) A storm damaged 40% of the houses in the port.
- b) The Connors family ran the company until 1981.
- c) They had built the house near the station.
- d) Picasso painted the portrait of the old man.
- e) They provided pencils for all students in the exam.
- f) Doctors tested over 550 people for the disease over a three-year period.
- g) The researchers calculated the percentages to three decimal places.
- h) They called their business the Universal Trading Company.

conveniently	optimistically	helpfully	brilliantly regularly	precisely	efficiently	badly

- 4. In most texts the active and the passive are mixed.

Read the following article and underline the passives.

BOOTS THE CHEMISTS

When John Boot died at 45, he was worn out by the strain of establishing his herbal medicine business. He had worked his way up from his early years as a farm labourer to be the owner of a substantial business. He was born in 1815, became a member of a Methodist chapel in Nottingham, and later moved to the city. Concerned by the situation of the poor, who were unable to afford a doctor, in 1849 he opened a herbal medicine shop which was called the British and American Botanic Establishment. In the early stages John was helped financially by his father-in-law, while his mother provided herbal knowledge.

On his death in 1860 the business was taken over by his wife, and she was soon assisted by their 10-year-old son, Jesse. He quickly showed the business ability which transformed his father's shop into a national business. He opened more shops in poor districts of the city and pioneered advertising methods. Another innovation was to do all his business in cash, rather than offering credit.

- 5. Could all the passives in the text be replaced by the active? What would be the result if most of them were?

- 6. The passive is used more in written than in spoken English, but should not be over-used, because it can give a very formal tone.

In the following text, which continues the history of Boots, the passive is used throughout. Change some of them into the active.

In 1889 he was introduced to Florence Rowe, the daughter of a bookseller, while on holiday. Her influence was felt by the business after they were married: the product range was enlarged to include stationery and books. In addition she was responsible for the introduction of the Boots subscription library and in-store cafes.

During World War 1 the factories were used to make a variety of products from sterilizers to gas masks. But by 1920 Jesse was being attacked by arthritis and was worried by the economic prospects. Boots was sold to an American rival for £2 m. This, however, was made bankrupt during the Depression and Boots was then bought by a British group for £6 m, while Jesse's son, John, was made chairman. The famous No. 7 cosmetics range was launched in the 1930s. In the 1939–45 War the saccharin equivalent to 700,000 tons of sugar was produced in the Nottingham factories.

12. Prefixes and Suffixes

1. Automatically and uncontrollable are examples of words containing prefixes and suffixes. Words like these are much easier to understand if you know how prefixes and suffixes affect word meaning.

Prefixes change or give the meaning.

Suffixes show the meaning or the word class.

Prefix	Meaning	Suffix	Word class/meaning
auto-	by itself	-ally	adverb
un-	negative	-able	ability

The machine started automatically.

The class of young boys was uncontrollable.

2. Prefixes.

- a) Negative prefixes. un-, in-, mis- and dis- often give adjectives and verbs a negative meaning: unclear, insane, mishear, disagree.
- b) A wide variety of prefixes define meaning, e.g. pre- usually means before; hence prefer, prehistory and, of course, prefix.

3. Common prefixes.

Find the meaning(s) of each prefix.

NB. Some prefixes have more than one meaning.

auto	autopilot	The plane flew on autopilot for six hours
co	co-ordinator	The co-ordinator invited them to a meeting
ex	ex-girlfriend	He met his ex-girlfriend on the station
ex	exclusive	It is difficult to join such an exclusive club

3.14 Prepositions after Verbs
1. Underline the prepositions in the following text.

The purpose of this paper is to examine the development of the textile industry in Britain over the period 1750–1850. This clearly contributed to the nation's industrialisation, and was valuable for stimulating exports. In conclusion, the paper sets out to demonstrate the relationship between the decline in agricultural employment and the supply of cheap labour in the factory context.

The table lists the main ways of using prepositions.

Find one example of each in the text.

noun + preposition	purpose of verb + preposition
adjective + preposition

15. Punctuation

1. Capitals.

It is difficult to give precise rules about the use of capital letters in modern English. However, they should be used in the following cases:

- | | |
|--|--|
| a) The first word in a sentence | In the beginning... |
| b) Names of organisations | Sheffield Hallam University |
| c) Days and months | Friday 21st July |
| d) Nationality words | France and the French |
| e) Names of people/places | Dr Martin Turner from Edinburgh |
| f) Titles (capitalise main words only) | The Uses of Literacy/The Duke of Kent |

2. Apostrophes (').

These are one of the most misused features of English punctuation. They are mainly used in two situations:

- | | |
|--|--|
| a) to show contractions | It's generally believed ... |
| NB. Contractions are not common in academic English. | |
| b) with possessives | The professor's secretary (singular)
Students' marks (plural) |

3. Semi-colons (;).

These are used to show the link between two connected phrases when a comma would be too weak and a full stop too strong.

Twenty people were interviewed for the first study; thirty-three for the second.

Semi-colons are also used to divide up items in a list when they have a complex structure:

Among the presents received by the president were three oil paintings of himself, all flattering; a pair of green parrots, which were very noisy; a solid gold medal and three or four suits of clothes.

NB. Semi-colons are quite rare in most types of writing.

4. Colons (:).

- | | |
|------------------------------|---|
| a) to introduce explanations | The meeting was postponed: the Dean was ill. |
| b) to start a list | Two factors were discussed: cultural and social. |
| c) to introduce a quotation | As Orwell said: 'all art is propaganda'. |

5. Quotation marks/inverted commas (' ... ' / " ... ").

- | | |
|--|--|
| a) single quotation marks are used to emphasise a word, to give quotations from other writers and to show direct speech: | |
| The word 'quiz' was first used in the nineteenth century. | |
| Goodwin's (1977) analysis of habit ... indicates that, in general, 'it will be more difficult to reverse a trend than to accentuate it'. | |
| 'Can anyone find the answer?' asked the lecturer. | |

CROSS REFERENCE

2.9 References and Quotations

NB. Longer quotations are usually indented (i.e. have a wider margin) or are set in smaller type.

- b) double quotation marks are used to show quotations inside quotations (nested quotations):

As Murphy has observed: 'Concepts of "typical" need careful examination.'

- c) quotation marks are used for the names of articles and chapters, but book and journal titles use italics.

6. Other punctuation marks.

Hyphens (-) are used with certain words and structures:

well-engineered/co-operative/three-year-old

Exclamation marks (!) and question marks (?):

'Well!' he shouted. 'Who would believe it?'

Brackets (...) are used to contain information of lesser importance:

There were only 31 marriages (out of 13,829) in which 'baker' was listed.

- j) T: 'Gregor Mendel can be considered the founder of modern genetics.'

17. Relative Pronouns

1. Relative pronouns (who/whose/where/which/that) introduce a relative clause.

The journal, which was edited by my tutor, was missing from the library.

The college where he studied has been given £4 million.

The teacher who interviewed me was a specialist in ancient music.

Dr Yamada, whose lecture I attended, presented the prizes.

He wrote about the area that I was interested in.

Which relative pronouns are used for:

- a) places?
- b) people?
- c) things?
- d) possession?

2. Insert a suitable relative pronoun in these sentences.

- a) The book he wanted had been borrowed by someone else.
- b) Beijing, she studied for six months, used to be called Peking.
- c) Charlie Chaplin, was born in England, was a great film comedian.
- d) A hydrometer is an instrument is used to measure density in liquids.
- e) Few people have heard of the man invented television.
- f) Mercury, is a liquid element, is used in many industrial processes.

3. As can be seen from the examples above, there are two kinds of relative clauses:

- a) Those which define the subject. In this case the relative clause must be included:

The college where he studied has been given £4 million.

- b) Those which give additional details:

The journal, which was edited by my tutor, was missing from the library.

Here the relative clause could be removed and the meaning would still be clear.

In this second type the relative clause is surrounded by commas (,), brackets or dashes (-)

4. Decide if the following sentences contain defining (D) or additional detail (A) clauses.

- a) Akio Morita was the person who invented the Walkman.
- b) The first thing that he did was to introduce a new system of assessment.
- c) The medical school, which has a very good reputation, charges £20,000 per year.

2.4 Definitions

- d) The president (who enjoyed playing jazz) was elected for a second term.
 e) A hurricane is a tropical storm that can do enormous damage.

5. In defining clauses both that and which can be used with things.

Toyota is a Japanese company that/which makes cars.

But for clauses that provide additional detail only which can be used:

Volkswagen, which is a German company, is a major car producer.

In defining clauses where the relative pronoun is the object its use is optional:

She applied to the university (that/which) her tutor had recommended.

The course (that/which) I wanted to take was not offered this semester.

The tutor (who) she wanted to meet was away for two months.

When the relative pronoun is the subject it must be included:

The scientists who discovered DNA worked in Cambridge.

Decide if the relative pronouns in the following are necessary. If not, cross them out.

- a) It was not known who was responsible for the explosion.
- b) The man who I read about was born in Scotland.
- c) The book that the professor wrote was remarkably short.
- d) Squirrels are mammals that live mainly in trees.
- e) The article that she referred to was published last year.

6. Insert a suitable relative pronoun in the text below. Write X if the pronoun is optional.

King Camp Gillette, a) invention of the disposable razor blade made his name world-famous, was an American b) had spent 40 years looking for a saleable invention. The idea c) changed his fortunes occurred in 1895, but he met considerable difficulties producing a thin, sharp blade d) could be made cheaply. He sold shares in the company to pay for the development work e) his partner, William Dickerson, was doing. In 1903, f) was their first year of business, they produced only 51 razors. But due to intensive advertising, g) potential Gillette quickly recognised, they rapidly increased sales to 250,000 two years later. The modern razor, h) is usually double-bladed, is directly related to the idea i) Gillette had over a hundred years ago.

18. Singular/Plural

- 2.7 Generalisations
 3.10 Nouns: Countable and Uncountable

1. This can be a confusing area, but the following illustrate the main areas of difficulty:

- a) Nouns should agree with verbs, and pronouns with nouns:
Those problems are unique.
There are many arguments in favour.
- b) Uncountable nouns and irregular plurals have no final -s:
Most students receive free tuition.
DNA is located in every part; hair, nails, teeth ...
- c) General statements normally use the plural:
State universities have lower fees.
- d) Each and every are followed by singular nouns:
Every student gets financial support.
- e) Two linked nouns should agree:
Both the similarities and differences are important.

Find the mistake in the following and decide what type (a–e above) it is.

- a) The proposal has both advantages and disadvantage. (....)

2. Study the following group phrases.

Singular + plural	Plural + plural	Plural + uncountable half the universities	two types of institutions	three areas of enquiry
a range of businesses	various kinds of courses	several fields of research
one of the elements	many species of ants	rates of progress

Note that if a verb has more than one subject it must be plural, even if the preceding noun is singular:

Scores of students, some teachers and the president are at the meeting.

Their valuable suggestions and hard work were vital.

Certain group nouns, e.g. team/army/government, can be followed by either a singular or plural verb:

The team was defeated three times last month. (collectively)

The team were travelling by train or bus. (separately)

3. Underline and correct the mistakes in the following (one per sentence).

	Tense	Reason for use
b
d e f g
h

NB. In the last month/year/decade = present perfect (unfinished period).
 Last month/year/decade = simple past (finished period).

2. Complete the following sentences by selecting the most suitable tenses.

- a) Home ownership (rise) steadily for fifty years.

- h) Lee (1992) (dispute) Sakamoto's theory.
- i) In the last six years inflation (fall) sharply in Europe.

3. Simple or continuous?

- a) In general, the continuous is used to focus on the activity itself or to stress its temporary nature. Compare the following:

She has been writing that report for six days.	(activity)
He is writing a travel article.	(temporary)
She writes children's books.	(usually)

- b) Also note that certain verbs are rarely used in the continuous. They are state verbs like prefer, want and believe. Another similar group is known as performative verbs (assume, deny, promise, refuse, suggest).

4. Select either simple or continuous in each case:

3.20 Time Words and Phrases

5. When writing paragraphs, it is important to be clear about which time phrases control the tenses of verbs:

For years, the condition of the family has produced some of the strongest debate heard in America. The statistics of collapse have appeared simple and clear. The proportion of children born outside marriage rose from 18% in 1980 to 33% in 1999. The share of households made up of two parents and their children fell from 45% in 1960 to only 23% in 2000.

In this case, the time phrase For years controls the tense of the first two sentences (present perfect). The following two sentences are in the simple past because of the dates 1980, 1999 and 1960, which show finished periods.

6. Read the text below and select the most suitable tense for each verb in brackets (time phrases in italic).

EATING OUT

a) the last few decades there has been a significant change in eating habits in the UK. b) the early 1980s eating out in restaurants and cafes has increased steadily. There are several reasons for this trend.
 50 years c) most women were housewives, and cooked for their families every day. But d), with more women working outside the home, less time has been available for food preparation. e), 71% of women aged 20–45 are at work, and f) 2015 it is estimated that this will rise to 84%.
 Another factor is the growth in disposable income, which has risen significantly g) the late 1970s. With more money in their pockets people are more likely to save the trouble of shopping and cooking by visiting their local restaurant.

6. Study the details of Napoleon's life and complete the biography below.

1769	born in Corsica
1784	entered military school in Paris
1789	French revolution started
1793	promoted to brigadier general
1796	appointed to command army of Italy; married Josephine
1799	returned from Egypt and became First Consul of France
1807	France controlled most of continental Europe
1810	divorced Josephine and married Marie-Louise, daughter of Austrian emperor
1812	forced to retreat from Russia
1814	exiled to Elba
1815	defeated at Waterloo and exiled to St Helena
1821	died in exile

Napoleon entered military school at the age of 15, five years a) the start of the French revolution. He rose quickly, becoming brigadier general at 24 and commander of the Italian army three years b) At 30 he was effectively the French dictator, and due to his military genius France controlled most of Europe c) 1807. When he divorced his first wife, Josephine, in 1810, they had been married d) 14 years. His campaigns were successful e) 1812, but in that year the disastrous retreat from Moscow marked the start of his decline. However, f) his years of absolute power he had made significant changes to European law and government. Although he died nearly 200 years g), Napoleon's influence is still felt throughout the continent.

4. Writing Models

Student Introduction

There are many possible formats for different types of essays, as well as non-academic texts such as letters and CVs. If a selection of formal letters, for example, is studied, it will be seen that different styles of heading and layout are used by different organisations. However, the following models are provided so that students may use the outlines confident that they will be acceptable in almost all situations.

Comparison and argument are common components of essay titles, and the models given here show one way of answering the questions. However, it must be remembered that argument may be only one part of the question, so that both comparison and discussion (plus other elements) could well be needed in the same essay (as illustrated in 4.4 Comparison Essay).

Faculties and departments may well give new students guidance about what is required in terms of style and layout. Above all, students need to examine a variety of styles of letters, CVs and essays, and to develop a suitable style of their own by synthesising the most appropriate features.

- c) Ref: MB/373
- d) 3 May 2002
- e) Dear Ms Tan
- f) Application for MA International Studies
- g) Further to your recent application, I would like to invite you to the university for an informal interview on Tuesday 21st May at 11 am. You will be able to meet the course supervisor, Dr Schmidt, and look round the department.
- h) A map of the campus and instructions for finding the university are enclosed.
- i) Please let me know if you will be able to attend on the date given.
- j) Yours sincerely
- k) M. Bramble
- l) Mick Bramble
 Administrative Assistant

Note the following points:

- a) When writing to somebody whose name you do not know, e.g. The Manager, use Dear Sir and Yours faithfully.
- b) A formal letter generally uses the family name in the greeting (Dear Ms Tan). Certain organisations may, however, use a first name with a family name or even a first name alone (Dear Jane Tan/Dear Jane).
- c) If the sender includes a reference it is helpful to quote it in your reply.

2. Write a reply to Mr Bramble making the following points:

- a) You will attend the interview on the date given.
- b) You would like to have the interview one hour later, owing to train times.

54 Sydney Road
Rowborough

3. Study the following newspaper advert. You have decided to apply for this job. Make notes for your letter of application, then write the letter, paying attention to layout as well as content.

STAFF REQUIRED FOR RECEPTION WORK AT CITY HOTEL

We are looking for enthusiastic and helpful receptionists (m/f) to join our team. Candidates should be well-presented and able to speak at least two languages. Hotel experience not necessary as training will be given. Ability to get on with people and work in a team more important. Some evening and weekend work. Good conditions and rates of pay. Apply in writing with CV and covering letter to: The Manager, Hotel Nelson, Queens Road, Rowborough RB2 4RN quoting Ref. EN2.

2. CVs

1. CV stands for curriculum vitae (also known as a résumé).

A CV is a summary of your education and work experience, often requested by prospective employers. Most professionals store their CVs electronically so that they can be updated when necessary.

2. There is considerable debate about the format of CVs, and much depends on your experience and the area you are working in.

The example given below is relatively short, as would be expected for a recent graduate.

Career aim

To develop my experience in marketing in a senior managerial role, using my knowledge of European languages.

Career history

2001–present Marketing Assistant, Eastern Foods, Derby

In my current post I am part of a team involved in marketing our products throughout the UK. I have helped organise several campaigns and given presentations in connection with these.

1997–8

English Teacher, Montpellier, France

During my year abroad I taught English at a school in Montpellier, which not only helped strengthen my French but also gave me valuable lessons in self-reliance.

Academic qualifications

2001 MBA (Rowborough University Business School)

2000 BA (Hons) 2:1 in European Languages (University of Leeds) with distinction in spoken French

Skills

Languages: knowledge of Spanish & French (advanced)/Italian (good)

ICT: competence with the following applications:

Word

Excel

Groupwise

Personal

I would describe myself as outgoing, friendly and a good communicator. I apply these qualities to establishing good customer relations and working with colleagues as part of a team.

Note:

- a) The above format is only one possibility and it is worth looking at other CVs to compare layouts.
 - b) Your address and phone number should be in your covering letter, not on the CV.
 - c) List qualifications and experience in reverse chronological order, starting with the most recent. Prospective employers are mainly interested in your latest achievements.
 - d) Do not clutter the CV with details of hobbies that are irrelevant to the job you are applying for. Similarly, your early education is unimportant.
 - e) Do not just give job titles but explain in detail what you did.
 - f) Give references only if asked to do so.
3. Prepare a CV for yourself. First make notes of all the important information (with dates), using similar headings to those in the example above. Then organise it as clearly as possible. Finally, type it on a computer and store it so it can be updated in future.

3. Designing and Reporting Surveys

1. Surveys, in which people are asked questions about their opinions or behaviour, are a common feature of academic work, especially in fields such as education, psychology and social sciences.

What are the reasons for carrying out surveys? List your ideas below.

- a)
- b)
- c)

2. Study the report of a survey carried out on a university campus. Complete the report by inserting suitable words from the box below into the gaps.

sample	conducted	slightly	respondents	random
questions	majority	questioned	mentioned	interviewees
common	questionnaire	generally	minority

Introduction

A survey was a) to find out how part-time work affects student life and study. The research was done by asking students selected at b) on the campus to complete a c) (see Appendix 1). 50 students were d) on Saturday April 23rd, with approximately equal numbers of male and female students.

Findings

Of the e), 30% currently had part-time jobs, 20% had had part-time jobs, but half had never done any work during university semesters (see Table 1). f) who were working or who had worked were next asked about the reasons for taking the jobs. The most common reason was lack of money (56%), but many students said that they found the work useful experience (32%) and others g) social benefits (12%).

Table 1. Do you have or have you had a part-time job?

	Men	Women	Total	%
have job now	8	7	15	30
had job before	4	6	10	20
never had job	14	11	25	50

The 25 students with work experience were next asked about the effects of the work on their studies. A significant h) (64%) claimed that there were no negative effects at all. However, 24% said that their academic work suffered i) , while a small j) (12%) reported serious adverse results, such as tiredness in lectures and falling marks.

Further k) examined the nature of the work that the students did. The variety of jobs was surprising, from van driver to busker, but the most l) areas were catering and bar work (44%) and secretarial (32%). Most students worked between 10 and 15 hours per week, though two (8%) worked over 25 hours. Rates of pay were m) near the national minimum wage, and averaged £5.20 per hour.

The final question invited students to comment on their experience of part-time work. Many (44%) made the point that students should be given larger grants so that they could concentrate on their studies full-time, but others felt that they gained something from the experience, such as meeting new people and getting insights into various work environments. One student said that she had met her current boyfriend while working in a city centre restaurant.

Conclusions

It is clear that part-time work is now a common aspect of student life. Many students find jobs at some point in their studies, but an overwhelming majority (88%) of those deny that it has a damaging effect on their studies. Most students work for only 2–3 hours per day on average, and a significant number claim some positive results from their employment.

Obviously, our survey was limited to a relatively small n) by time constraints, and a fuller study might modify our findings in various ways.

3. Question 1 is given above Table 1. What were the other questions in this survey? Using the results above, write possible questions below.

- 3.
- 4.
- 5.
- 6.
- 7.

4. What is the main tense in (a) Introduction and Findings and (b) Conclusion? Explain the reason for the difference.

5. Questionnaire Design.

Which is the better question?

- i) How old are you?
- ii) Are you (a) under 20, (b) between 21 and 30, (c) over 30?

6. What is the main difference between the two questions?

- i) What do you think of university students?
- ii) Do you think university students are (a) lazy, (b) hardworking, (c) average

7. You are preparing a survey on one of the following subjects. Prepare a questionnaire of no more than ten questions to collect the most useful data.

- a) How overseas students learn vocabulary
- b) Student attitudes to the cinema
- c) A comparison of undergraduate and post-graduate leisure activities

4. Comparison Essay

A COMPARISON OF CLASSROOM LEARNING WITH INTERNET-BASED TEACHING

Introduction

Since the late 1990s internet-based teaching (also known as e-education) has emerged as a potential rival to traditional classroom learning. The former normally involves having access to a secure site on the internet where a graded series of lessons is available, which have assignments sent and returned by email. Although online courses are now offered by many institutions, it is by no means clear that they offer real advantages compared with classroom education. Little research has been done so far on their effectiveness, but this essay sets out to examine the arguments on both sides and attempts to draw conclusions from them.

The benefits of online study

Two main advantages of internet use in education are put forward. Firstly, it is seen as more economical, in that once a course is prepared, it can be used by large numbers of students. The savings made by not having to employ so many teachers should be reflected in cheaper course fees. The second benefit is convenience; instead of having to attend classes at fixed times and places, students are free to study when they choose and progress at their own pace. Furthermore, in studying from home there is no need to travel to the college or university, which saves both time and money. A student living in a small town in China, for example, can now study a course at an American college without the worry of travelling, accommodation or homesickness.

The continuing popularity of classroom education

Despite the considerations mentioned above, classroom learning shows no signs of being replaced by e-learning. It seems that face-to-face contact with a teacher is still regarded as the best way for students to make progress, despite the expense and inconvenience involved. Not only the personal contact with a teacher but also the support and encouragement gained from being part of a class may be reasons for this. Membership of a group may also create a useful spirit of competition, which stimulates learning.

Discussion

Given the increasing pressure on university places in many countries, internet-based teaching is widely seen as a convenient development. However, e-learning eliminates personal contact and travel from education, which are possibly the aspects many students value. Sitting at home working on a computer may be economical, but clearly cannot replace the social experience of attending courses. However, there are many people who are unable, through either work or family commitments, or owing to lack of funds, to go to classes, and who would clearly find internet learning beneficial. Online courses can also be used to support taught courses, for instance by providing access to extra materials. In many ways these kinds of courses are similar to 'universities of the air', such as Britain's Open University, which have developed distance learning so successfully in the last forty years.

Conclusion

Faced by growing demand for university places, many institutions are likely to develop online courses, but the apparent benefits of e-learning may be less than first appear. Students seem to value the personal contact of the classroom highly, despite its cost and inconvenience. There may be a role for internet-based courses to supplement teacher-taught ones, and certainly for people with other commitments they will be the only practical option. There is an urgent need for research on the effectiveness of this type of learning, which should help maximise its advantages in the future.

EDUCATION IS THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTOR IN NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT – DISCUSS

Introduction

'National development' is a rather vague term that could mean the growth of a sense of national identity, or the development of a country's economy. This essay will use the second definition, since this is more commonly seen as a function of education provided by the state. Many European countries, such as Germany, began providing primary education for all in the late nineteenth century, in the phase of early industrialisation.

Education must be considered on several different levels, so that today most western countries are concerned with provision from nursery to higher education, whereas developing countries attempt to deliver basic education (e.g. reading and writing) to their people.

This paper attempts to evaluate the importance of these varying levels of educational provision in encouraging economic growth, compared with other factors such as national culture, natural resources and government. The role of education in fostering development will be examined first, and then other factors that affect growth will be considered.

The impact of education

At its simplest, education sets out to teach literacy and numeracy. People who can read and count are capable of being trained for many roles in the industrial or service sectors, as well as learning by themselves. Even in the simplest economies, dependent on agriculture, the education of women has been shown to lead to dramatic improvements in family welfare. In more developed economies further skills are required, such as languages, engineering and computing. Good education does not merely teach people how to function passively, but provides them with the skills to ask questions and therefore make improvements. At university level, education is closely involved in research that leads to technical and social advances.

The limits of education

Education does not operate in a vacuum: cultural, religious, legal and other factors all influence the rate of economic growth. Soviet Russia, for example, had an advanced educational system, but many graduates were under-employed owing to the restrictions of the political system. Similar situations exist in many countries today because of the failure of the economy to expand fast enough to create sufficient jobs. Clearly, then, development requires efficient and honest government to encourage a dynamic economy.

A strong work ethic, as found in the USA, Japan and Germany, also aids growth. In such societies children are brought up to believe that both the individual and society will benefit from hard work. Natural resources such as oil are another consideration. Brunei, for example, previously a poor country reliant on fishing, today has one of the highest per capita GDPs in the world.

Discussion and conclusion

Education alone may have little effect on a nation's development. The world's first industrial revolution, for instance, occurred in eighteenth-century Britain, when the majority of people were still illiterate (some pioneer industrialists themselves could not read or write). It seems that the availability of capital and a secure political and legal environment were more crucial in this case.

However, given the presence of some of the factors mentioned in the previous section, education clearly has an important part to play in developing the skills and abilities of the people. Ultimately, they are the most important resource a country possesses, and their education is a priority for all successful states.

Writing Tests

These tests can be used to assess different aspects of writing performance. The first test assesses cohesion. The accuracy tests (2 and 3) check use of particular word classes such as conjunctions or prepositions. Students having difficulties with, for example, articles, should look at the relevant unit in Part 3. Test 4 is a comparison. They can be used in the classroom or for self-assessment.

WRITING TEST 1

(Cohesion)

The parts of sentences below make two paragraphs that compare speaking with writing. Some parts are already numbered. Fill in the remaining numbers. Use internal clues and punctuation to help you find the correct order.

SPEAKING AND WRITING

- 1) When we speak, it is normally to one or
 - ...) to study our listeners' faces for expressions that tell
 - ...) for example agreement, or amusement.
 - ...) they often find the situation stressful.
 - 3) As we speak, we are able
 - ...) For most people, speaking feels like a natural activity,
 - ...) a small number of people, who are often well known to us.
 - ...) If their expressions show incomprehension
 - ...) us their reaction to what we are saying;
 - ...) though if they have to make a formal speech
 - ...) we will probably restate what we are saying.
- ...) Writers cannot check if the readers understand, or are interested - ...) to avoid the dangers of being misunderstood by readers,

 - ...) we have no way of knowing who may read our words.
 - ...) It also explains why writing must be as clear and simple as possible,
 - ...) speaking, and often uses a more formal style.
 - ...) an unknown audience.

WRITING TEST 2 (Accuracy)

Read the text for gist and then complete it by writing one word in each gap.

Most overseas students who come to study (a) English-speaking countries find that their first (b) is listening. Understanding (c) many forms of spoken English is more (d) than they expected.

(e), after a month (f) two, the majority find that their listening (g), and their next concern is speaking. This skill is more difficult to practise, so improvement (h) to be slower. But (i) three or four months most students find that (j) can function quite (k) in terms of shopping and travelling.

A (l) area of difficulty is writing, which is possibly the (m) difficult skill to master, (n) it is more impersonal than oral / aural skills and depends (o) the student learning a complex series of conventions. This explains (p) many students find it (q) to attend (r) intensive course in academic English (s) they begin (t) university studies.

(WRITING TEST 3 (Accuracy)

Read the text for gist and then complete it by writing one word in each gap.

All students need a) to live, so finding a suitable place is likely to be a priority when they arrive to start a new course. Apart b) the minority c) live with their parents, there are only two d) of accommodation which are generally affordable.

e) all universities provide f) of residence, which can help new students g) friends and develop a social life. They can be a h) choice, usually being close to other university facilities, i) some may find that they are noisy, expensive and have j) small rooms.

The alternative is to rent k) house or flat from a private landlord with a group of other students. l) kind of shared accommodation m) offer greater independence and privacy, and can n) be more economical. However, it does mean taking o) more responsibility, p) bills need paying and the rooms have to q) cleaned.

Wherever students choose to live, several things are r) A quiet place to work, a sense of security and s) environment that allows t) to sleep properly all contribute to academic success.

WRITING TEST 4

(Comparison)

Study the information in the table comparing two cities, which both have good universities. Use it to write a report on which would be the more suitable location for an overseas student planning a one-year course (about 200 words).

	Borchester	Rowborough
population	220,000	1,560,000
summer climate	warm and wet	cool and quite dry winter climate	cool and windy	cold and wet
city type	old cathedral city with modern service industries	19th century industrial city with modern mixed industries
terrain	flat, lots of parks	hilly with several lakes
cost of accommodation	quite high	medium public transport	bus service not very good	buses and trams, both good main advantages	relaxed atmosphere	good range of shops and sports facilities
main drawbacks	university campus is 6 km from city centre	high rates of crime in some areas distance from capital	230 km	125 km

Answers

Providing answers for a writing course is less clear cut than for other language areas. In some exercises there is only one possible answer, but in other cases several possibilities exist. Teachers need to exercise common sense, and accept any reasonable answer. In the case of exercises where students can choose their own topic and it is therefore impossible to provide an answer, students still appreciate having a model answer, and so some have been included.

Part 1: The Writing Process

1. Background to Writing

1

notes	to record reading or lectures
report	to describe something a student has conducted, e.g. an experiment/a survey	1000–2000

- 2biv bibliography
- 2bv case study
- 2bvi preface
- 2bvi index

- 4a title
- 4b sub-heading
- 4c phrase
- 4d sentence
- 4e paragraph

- 5 Texts are divided into paragraphs to separate the main points and make them easier to read. Paragraphs usually vary in length from three to eight sentences.

para 2 begins:	The first issue to ...
para 3 begins:	Diversification must also ...
para 4 begins:	A further consideration ...

2. Developing Plans from Titles

1a	Define	give a definition
	Outline	describe the main features
1b	Compare	examine the similarities
	Contrast	look at the differences
1c	Evaluate	consider the value
1d	Trace	describe the main features
	Illustrate	give examples
2	Describe	give a detailed account
	Examine	divide into sections and discuss each critically
	State	give a clear and simple account
	Suggest	make a proposal and support it
	Summarise	deal with a complex subject by giving the main points

4 Sample plan:

	outline of essay
main body	case studies of two mergers discussion of benefits of each merger conclusion	summary of findings: value of mergers depends on quality of management in merged firm

- 5 The following sections are the most important:
- 5a An analysis of candidates for membership before 2010/An outline of the enlargement of the EU between 1975 and the present.
- 5b A study of major privatisations in the UK/A discussion of the benefits achieved by privatisation.

- 5c A report on the spread of TB worldwide/A case study showing how TB relates to social class.
- 5d A report on the development of children who remain at home until five/A discussion comparing speaking ability in both groups of children.
- 5e The benefits of using books/The drawbacks of internet sources.
- 6a Identify means to select and explain. The writer must identify the chief reasons for poverty in the Chinese countryside.
- 6b Calculate means to make a mathematical estimate. Here the writer must look at patterns of coffee consumption and attempt to calculate how much difference a price decrease would make.
- 6c Classify means to put into categories. Different types of desert need to be described, and then methods of control should be proposed.

3. Evaluating a Text

a	fact	true
b	fact	false
c	opinion
d	fact	true
e	fact & opinion	true
f	fact	false
g	fact & opinion	false

- 5a Factual until last sentence (In the future ...), which is an opinion.
- 5b Most sentences mix facts and opinions. Most of the facts are untrue, e.g. the population is not two million. Clearly an unreliable source!
- 5c Mainly opinion, supported by some facts at the end. Evaluation depends on judging how well the writer builds his/her case. Subject knowledge clearly necessary.
- 5d Although this begins with a generally accepted fact, the second sentence contains a totally untrue statement, and the speculation built on this is absurd.
- 5e Mainly factual, except for an opinion in the first sentence (shocking). The final sentence is speculation.

4. Understanding Purpose and Register

- 2a amuse/entertain
- 2b inform/persuade
- 2c inform

a	formal	without recourse/empowered/the complainant
b	academic	yielded clear interactions/review of the literature/Pearson and Mayer (1998)
c	journalistic	Amazing recent research/old folk/'grey entrepreneurs'

5. Selecting Key Points

- 2 Many possibilities, but should include the idea of financial success and medical developments, e.g. Millionaire American medical inventor.
- 3 1) b 2) a 3) c
- 4.1 Lord May... has claimed that the world is facing a wave of extinctions similar to the five mass extinctions of past ages.
- 4.2 He calculates that the current rate of extinction is between 100 and 1000 times faster than the historical average.
- 4.3 ... the present situation is caused by human consumption of plants, which has resulted in a steady increase in agriculture and a consequent reduction in habitat for animals.
- 4.4 Lord May also pointed out that it was very difficult to make accurate estimates as nobody knew how many species of animals lived on the planet.
- 5a ...bottled water costs 700 times more than tap water, but is often of inferior quality.
 ... although bottled water advertising often associated the product with sport and health there was no truth in this link.
 Labels on bottled water often referred to 'spring' and 'natural water', which were meaningless phrases.
- 5b Now the genetic code of the plague bacterium has been 'read' successfully by scientists; a total of 465 million 'letters' of DNA. They believe that this will help in the development of vaccines for the plague ...

6. Note-Making

- 1 to keep a record of reading/lectures to revise for exams to help remember main points to prepare for essays
- 2 Before: listening/reading/selecting
 After: writing/speaking

5. Source: Nemecova, I. (1998) Medical Report 34, pp. 78–86

- 6b It is thought that about one in ten people suffer from severe insomnia.
- 6c The cost of insomnia for the American economy has been calculated at approximately $35 billion a year.
- 7 Again, there is a range of possibilities, of which the following is an example:
 Findings by sleep researchers suggest that established cures for insomnia, for instance counting sheep, do not work, though visualising an attractive view may significantly encourage sleep. 50 insomniacs were split into three groups by Oxford university scientists. The first thought of water falling, and the second attempted to count sheep. A third group was not specially instructed. The findings show that the group thinking of waterfalls went to sleep faster. It appears that repetitive situations are not effective, because they are too tedious. The research has multiple uses, since 10% of the population are believed to have difficulty sleeping, and the cost of insomnia for the American economy has been calculated at around $35 billion annually.

8 Sample paraphrase:

Antarctica was unexplored until the 20th century, and still has a tiny population in relation to its size. Yet it suffers from various pollution problems which have been described in a report by a New Zealand government agency. The low temperatures there impede the usual pattern of decay, though compared with most parts of the world it remains in pristine condition. Some long-established scientific bases have large piles of garbage around them.

Few people realise that Antarctica has very little precipitation, so that in the current context of global warming the ice tends to reveal the rubbish that previously was slowly being buried under snow. For more than a decade the nations involved in Antarctic research have respected an agreement to repatriate their garbage, and this should gradually solve the problem. But there are a few items that will not be cleared up, since they belonged to the early period of exploration and have now acquired historic interest.

8. Summary Writing

1 Features of good summaries should include: selection of main features/accuracy (i.e. not distorting the original)/clear expression.

2 making detailed notes from sections of journal articles and books making global summaries of writers' ideas and theses

3 Possible answers:

3b key points/main ideas

3c use your own words/paraphrase

3d order of the ideas where necessary

3e important points/ideas

4 a) is the best summary

b) fails to describe the experiment

c) neither describes the experiment or its significance

6 Possible answers:

6a weather forecasting methods

6b blossoming of local tree

6c castor (for dry)

6d the monsoon can be quite accurately forecast by the time of the tree's flowering

7 Model answer:

Indian scientists are checking ancient weather forecasting methods, such as the old saying that links the date of the monsoon to the flowering time of a local tree. This has been used by farmers to select either peanuts (for wet conditions) or castor (for dry). Dr Kanani of Gujarat Agricultural University has found that the monsoon can be quite accurately forecast using the time of the tree's flowering.

8 Model answer:

Recent Indian research confirms the accuracy of an ancient method of forecasting the monsoon's arrival used by farmers to choose crops.

He believes that

4 Model answer:

Source C claims that tourism creates a significant amount of employment which provides a welcome alternative to traditional work such as farming. However, Source D points out that many of these jobs are insecure and poorly paid, being likely to contribute to social tensions. This negative view is partly supported by Source E, who insists that despite some positive examples the more common experience of developing countries is for tourism to exacerbate social ills such as crime and prostitution.

10. Planning a Text1 Other possible ideas:

tourism helps poorer countries develop tourist industry vulnerable to political/natural disasters package holidays helped to popularise foreign travel huge potential demand from developing countries

2 Most suitable structure would be based on time, since the title asks for study of past and predictions for the future.

3 Sample plan:

Main body:

ii) package holidays helped to popularise foreign travel

iii) tourism helped poorer countries to develop

iv) constant demand for new destinations and new types of holiday

Conclusion: there is a huge potential demand for travel in developing countries but tourist industry is vulnerable to political/natural disasters

4c Time

4d For and against

4e Comparison

5 Main body:

i) benefits of TV advertising: reach large audience, have strong impact

ii) drawbacks: expensive and can be ignored

iii) benefits of newspaper advertising: flexible, cheap, focused

iv) drawbacks: static

Conclusion: TV more effective in reaching large numbers but newspapers probably better for specialised markets

7 It would be better to include (a), (c) and (e) in the introduction as background information. (b), (d) and (f) would contribute to the main body. A discussion/conclusion section is needed to assess the overall situation. A revised plan might look like this:

Introduction

reasons for using private sector negative effects on state system positive effects on state system

10 Model answer:

The last two decades have seen a steady increase in demand for higher (i.e. university-level) education worldwide. Rising costs in this sector have put pressure on national budgets, causing many countries to attempt to shift some of the cost to the students, often in the form of loans. A degree generally remains the key to better jobs and opportunities, yet if students have to pay a greater share of the cost this will discriminate against poorer families. This essay examines the question of access to university by comparing the situation in a developed country, the United States, with a developing country, Turkey.

Limitations of research

Proposals for further research

4 Model answer:

Summary: The results suggest that culture was only one factor in determining successful adaptation. Older students, those with previous experience of living abroad, and those with better language proficiency all seemed to adapt better.

Implications: The findings suggest that students should possibly study abroad when they are more mature, and that they should aim for a higher level of language ability before they leave home.

Limitations: Although this was quite a large survey only about 30% of overseas students at the university were involved. Some national groups were under-represented.

Proposals: As we are not aware of other previous research in this field, it would be useful to replicate the study in another university, possibly with a different cross-section of overseas students, to see if similar results emerged.

15. Re-reading and Re-writing

4 Model answer:

Despite this, there are significant differences between the structure and workings of the higher education system in the two countries. This essay attempts to compare the admission procedures, length of courses for first and higher degrees, teaching methods, assessment procedures and systems of financial support for students. These areas have been selected as being of central importance for a valid comparison.

5 Model answer:

The need for education is crucial in any field. Technology has become critical for economic development, and higher levels of education are constantly demanded by the modern workplace, in both manufacturing and the service sector. Scientific research is clearly related to higher education. The possession of natural resources is no longer so critical for development. Take Japan, a country with few natural riches, where most of the land is mountainous, but which now is one of the world's strongest economies. Effective education, linked with a powerful work ethic and stable government, has allowed Japan to reach this position in a short period of time.

- 3 Note that some flexibility is needed with this exercise. The corrected text below is not perfect English, but is much clearer than the original.

I come from China, which is a very traditional country. I think before giving my own situation and plans, I have to say something about my country, because its culture has affected me very much. My country has 5,000 years of history, so in my brain there are a lot of things which are from it.

When I first arrived in the UK I studied in Cambridge, which is the best university in the world. Although I just studied in a language school in Cambridge, I felt very good. I learned a lot, not only from the school, but also from Cambridge society. That is why I chose Cambridge to study my foundation course. The foundation course was just for overseas students to improve their English.

I would like to study business, because when China joins the WTO, my country will need a lot of people who know business very well. So I will choose a business foundation course, with computing and mathematics, because computers are very useful in modern society. On the future course I think the biggest problem will be vocabulary, so I am planning to remember as much as I can. I will spend more time on mathematics, because I have never studied it before.

Another problem is to finish homework in time. Sometimes I think homework is not useful for me, so I just leave it, which is a bad custom. The last and the greatest problem is homesickness, which always slows down my progress, but studying abroad is my own choice, so I have to try my best.

5. Discussion

3 Model answer for title (a):

pros: more security for children with mother, mother is able to take more care of home cons: children have less chance to mix with others, mothers have more limited role

Title: Instead of going out to work, mothers should stay at home and look after their children until they are at least five – Discuss.

- a) Introduction the growth in women's participation in the work force – increased use of nurseries
- b) Advantages more social mixing for children higher income for family more varied roles for women
- c) Disadvantages less security for children women have to deal with career and home
- d) Conclusion depends on individual situation

4 Model answers:

It has been argued that staying at home gives children security, but the evidence suggests that there are more social advantages in attending a nursery.

While fast food is often claimed to be unhealthy, there appears to be little firm evidence to support this.

6 Model answer:

It appears that Lomborg's definition of air quality is limited to sulphur dioxide, and fails to take into account more recent threats.

7 Model answer:

- 5c According to Orwell (1940), few of Dickens' characters have a convincing profession, with the exception of David Copperfield, who follows Dickens' own career. 'With most of the others, the way they earn their living is very much in the background.' (pp. 54–55)

- 4f Women were enfranchised in 1994.
- 4g The Russian inflation led to poverty and disease.
- 4h A malaria vaccine may be discovered in the next ten years.

- 4i There were two main causes of the American Revolution.
- 5a Currently, significant numbers of children are starting school at the age of four or less, whereas thirty years ago five was the normal age. There appear to be various reasons for the change; mothers, for example, need to rejoin the labour force. There are mixed views about the effects of this change on the children concerned. Jenkins (1989) claims that early school attendance causes social problems such as theft and drug taking. There seems to be considerable evidence to support his views and there may be an argument in favour of a state subsidy for women to stay at home with their children.
- 5b There appear to be two principal reasons for the growing traffic congestion. Firstly, public transport has become increasingly expensive relative to the falling cost of motoring. In addition, car ownership is much more convenient than using public transport. Together, these factors result in higher vehicle density.

Dear Mr Bramble
Informal Interview

Thank you for inviting me to interview on May 21st. I will be able to attend on that date, but it would be much more convenient if I could have the interview at 12, due to the train times from Rowborough.

Could you please let me know if this alteration is possible?

Yours sincerely

Dear Sir

Vacancy for Reception Staff

I am writing in response to your advert for reception staff (Evening News 15/10).

I am currently studying at Rowborough University, but I am looking for part-time work, and believe that I have the qualities you are seeking. As you will see from my enclosed CV I have previous experience of working in a team, and speak Mandarin and Japanese as well as English. Having no family commitments I am quite prepared to work evenings or weekends.

I believe that I could make a useful contribution to your business, which I am considering as a future career, and hope to hear from you soon.

Yours faithfully

P. Tan

Writing Test 4

Model answer:

A COMPARISON OF BORCHESTER AND ROWBOROUGH AS A STUDY LOCATION

Rowborough is a large industrial city with a population of one and a half million, whereas Borchester is an old city with a much smaller population. These basic differences determine their suitability as centres for a university course.

Rowborough can offer a wider range of leisure facilities but Borchester has a quieter character. Rowborough may have a worse climate, being cool even in summer and wet in winter, while winters in Borchester are less cold, though the summers tend to be wet.

Rowborough is hillier than Borchester, which might be a drawback for cyclists. However, Rowborough does have a better public transport system, which may compensate for the hills. Borchester also has a rather remote campus, which might involve a lot of travelling. It is also likely to be more expensive in terms of accommodation, and is rather distant from the capital. On the other hand, some areas in Rowborough suffer from high crime rates.

Clearly, each city has its advantages: Borchester is more likely to suit a student looking for peace and quiet, who can tolerate some inconvenience, while Rowborough would be suitable for someone keen to economise and wanting a more lively atmosphere.
